Constitution Day.
Our Sore Finger.
A New White House.
Nice Washington Ladies.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Copyright, 1927.

THIS is Constitution Day. Seventy-five per cent of the people don't know what the Constitution is exactly, or much of anything about it. For the other 25 per cent, the Eighteenth Amendment, which says you mustn't have more than one-half of 1 per cent alcohol in your beer, is 99 per cent of the whole constitution.

THIS grieves learned patriots who want the whole Constitution to be known and admired. It need not surprise them if a man has a sore finger with symptoms of blood poisoning, that finger seems to him bigger than all the rest of his body.

The prohibition amendment is our national sore finger. Both big parties have agreed to wrap it up and say nothing about it in their 1928 platforms. But they cannot ignore it forever.

Bootlegging and bootleg crime are a sore that must be cut out some day.

THIS writer had luncheon with the President and Mrs. Coolidge at the White House yesterday, and afterward Edward Duffy of the Associated Press and the other newspaper "boys" wanted to know what the President said. The "boys" are still arguing about the meaning of the six famous words, "I do not choose to run," and that amuses the President.

To him and those that know him, it is as though these "boys" were discussing the meaning of "twice two are four."

If this country found itself at war with Timbuctoo, Thibet, or Patagonia, or in any other great emergency, the President of course would stick to his job. For he would then "choose," as in duty bound, a different course.

With conditions as they are the President's admirably chosen words are final. He does not elaborate them or discuss them.

He does dwell enthusiastically on the hospitality that he encountered every where in the West during his vacation, and talks with special satisfaction of the excellent work done in the great Mississippi flood in which hundreds of thousands were moved from their homes to safety, cared for and moved safely back again. The President praised generously the work done by Herbert Hoover, chosen by the President, and the effective co-operation of the Army, Navy, Agricultural Department, and all other branches of the government.

THE White House has been done over, and wives of Presidents in years to come will bless the name of Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, whose suggestions have provided comfortable quarters for the White House servants, adequate closets for White House linens and other needed improvements dear to the hearts of competent housekeepers.

Shelves around the walls provide more bookspace for the President's study and work room on the second floor. That is all that has been done for him in the White House renovating.

The traditional colors of the rooms, Red Room, Blue Room, etc., have been preserved, as a matter of course, in the redecorating. A new rug adorns the Red Room, in the middle of it an angry eagle with "E Pluribus Unum" above his head. He has an olive branch in his right claw, sharp arrows in his left and keeps his angry eye on the left foot. Wise bird, he knows that if he takes care of his arrows, the olive branch will take care of itself.

THE President and Mrs. Coolidge look extremely well, and praise South Dakota climate. Those that know the President

Baby Clara Mary Courtney for 12 long, long weeks has waited with all the patience her seven months will allow for her mother, Mrs. Mercedes Courtney, to come back and get her from a neighbor in whose care she was left when Mother went "to find a job." The baby is cared for at a local hospital.

Autoist Dies in 400-Foot Plunge

WRECKAGE AFTER LONG DROP

John Daniels, 22, of Grandview avenue, was injured when the automobile of which the wreckage is shown above hurtled over an embankment in Grandview avenue and fell 400 feet to Penn avenue extension in Wilkins township. Daniels died later in the West Penn Hospital. The men in the picture are attendants at the scrap yard to which the wreckage was taken and Motorcycle Patrolman William Wilkinson.

4 DIE HERE IN AUTO CRASHES

Four men are dead as results of auto accidents in Pittsburgh and its suburbs over night.

Plunging down a 400-foot embankment from Grandview avenue, Wilkins township, into Penn avenue extension, in his automobile, John Daniels, 22, of Grandview avenue, was killed last night.

Daniels was driving in Grandview avenue when he lost control of his car as he neared his home. After the headlong plunge, he was extricated from the wreckage of his demolished car and rushed to the Braddock General hospital where he died at 9 o'clock last night.

Daniels was the son of John Daniels, Westinghouse policeman, who was mysteriously slain about two years ago. Since his father's death, the son has been the sole sup-

The lower Penn avenue political feud added two more gun victims to its casualty list late last night. One is reported in a critical condition in the West Penn Hospital this morning. They were shot down at Penn avenue and Twenty-second street by an auto load of gangsters who mistook them for henchmen of a rival faction.

George Faber, 24, of 1242 Fayette street, North Side, the more seriously wounded, was shot in the chest and lung. Joseph Pace, 24, of 1243 Page street, North Side, was shot in the left foot. He was able to leave the hospital.

The two men, accompanied by Ben

Generally fair and somewhat warmer tonight; Sunday partly cloudy, probably local thundershowers Sunday afternoon; cooler Sunday night.

Today Last for City Voters to Register

Today is the city voters' last chance to register for the primary election, next Tuesday, and for the November election. In Pittsburgh approximately 90,000 persons already have exercised their rights of citizenship by registering at the two previous registration days and the total number of those preparing to vote far exceeds the enrollment for last year.

This is expected to be the banner day. Those who obtain their tax receipts and register now will be privileged to vote unchallenged in the presidential election next year. Personal registration applies to the cities of Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Duquesne and Clairton. The registrars will be at every polling place in Pittsburgh today from 8 a. m. to 11 a. m. and from 5 p. m. to 11 p. m., daylight saving time.

STRIP GUNS FELL TWO MORE

Short of 1115 Fayette street, William Keun, 4026 Vinceton street, and Howard Okum, 1307 Sheffield street, became the target of gangsters as they stood on the sidewalk at Penn avenue and Twenty-second street after having visited a friend who conducts a confectionery store nearby.

The gangsters' automobile was driven slowly in Penn avenue. Before their victims realized any attention was being paid them, revolvers had been trained on them and bullets were flying. A dozen shots were fired. Then the gangsters' auto increased its speed and disappeared down Penn avenue.

Faber and Fuoe were taken by their companions to the West Penn Hospital. Police were rushed to the scene in response to a riot call, but found no trace of the gangsters.

Companions of the wounded pair told of the shooting. They said it occurred just after they left the store of Walter Gallagher at 2201 Penn avenue. They were trying to decide whether to return to the North Side or to make another visit when the shooting began, they told police.

Heat Wave Passes On

The heat wave, which for several days has held Pittsburgh in its grip, bringing three deaths and much suffering, had passed on to the East today, leaving in its wake the mild, pleasant temperatures of Indian summer.

Today, weather bureau officials said, the skies will be clear and there will be little change in temperature. Temperature for the month to this date, they said, has been 15 per cent above normal.

IRISH FLIERS QUIT

British Royal Air Force, who started from here yesterday afternoon for New York in the mon-plane Princess Xenia, was forced to turn back last night when a 40-mile-an-hour headwind made progress across the ocean impossible. He brought his plane safely to earth at 7:30 p. m. at Beale Strand, near Ballybunnion, County Kerry, Ireland, after deciding that further attempts to brave adverse weather conditions would be little less than suicide.

No further attempt to span the Atlantic from East to West by airplane is likely to be made by him during the remainder of the present year, Capt. MacIntosh announced today.

Capt. MacIntosh, accompanied by Commandant James C. Fitzmaurice, of the Irish Free State air force, hopped off from Dublin at 1:36, Irish time, Friday afternoon, in spite of the warning of weather forecasters, who predicted they would encounter unfavorable winds and storms over the Atlantic. The Princess Xenia was sighted at three points on the Irish coast, and on each occasion the plane was bucking terrific winds and equally weather.

In explaining his decision to turn back, Capt. MacIntosh stated that the Princess Xenia had been between two and three hours at sea when very heavy weather was encountered. The visibility, the flier stated, was very poor, and at times it was necessary to fly as low as 50 feet above the water.

"We found it impossible to steer a true compass course," MacIntosh said, "and we decided to return."

MacIntosh turned back toward the Irish coast, and shortly before 7:30 o'clock made a perfect landing on a level stretch of sand at Ballybunnion. The plane was not damaged.

Capt. MacIntosh said the plane had functioned perfectly. Both he and Commandant Fitzmaurice were visibly disheartened by the failure of their plans.

The fliers spent the night at Limerick, Ireland. After an inspection of their plane, they were to return to Dublin later today.

Mercedes Courtney, nee McGonigle, left her baby with a neighbor, the report says.

"Will you keep her for a couple of weeks?" she asked. "I'll be back for her when I find a job. It won't be longer than that, I'm sure."

But to this day Mrs. Courtney has not appeared or communicated with her neighbor. Several weeks ago the infant was placed in a hospital.

Now what folks would like to know is: Where is Mrs. Courtney? If she doesn't want her little one will she please make her whereabouts known and sign a release for the baby so that some love-starved woman may take her and give her a home and a chance to live?

The babe is in charge of Miss Annie MacFedries, city missionary, who has straightened the tangled path of many a little life. Anyone who knows the whereabouts of Mrs. Courtney should communicate with Miss MacFedries at 1310 Arch street, North Side.

Mrs. Courtney is described as 24, 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing 135 pounds and with brown hair, brown eyes and even white teeth.

FEAR FOUL PLAY AS COAL MAN DISAPPEARS

Plans are being made for an intensive search, centering here, for Charles T. Smith, 30, of 515 North Jefferson street, Kittanning, who has been mysteriously missing since he came to Pittsburgh on a business mission a week ago.

Accompanied by John Smith, a brother, the missing man came here and intended to go to Connellsville to negotiate supposedly for the purchase of a mine. He mentioned fear of entering the strike region before parting with his brother. He did not return and relatives fear foul play.

Smith is described as 6 feet tall, weight 185, light hair, light eyes, powder mark on bridge of his nose. He wore a dark suit, striped shirt and black bow ties at the time he disappeared.

CARNEGIE ART JUDGES LAND

European members of the Jury of Award for the Twenty-sixth Carnegie Institute International Exhibition, who landed in New York on the Berengeria yesterday, were met by Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of Fine Arts.

The visiting artists are Maurice Greiffenhagen of Great Britain, Maurice Denis of France, Felice Casorati of Italy and Karl Hofer of Germany. They were accompanied by Guillaume Lerolle, European representative of Carnegie Institute.

They will arrive in Pittsburg late Monday morning. These foreign artists, together with four American painters, Eugene Savage, Abrom Poole, Eugene Speicher and Horatio Walker, will meet on Tuesday to award the prizes for the International.

The International opens on October 13.

HORSES SHOW PACES TODAY

The finest jumping and saddle horses in the Pittsburgh district were going through their paces today as part of the annual horse show of the Pittsburgh Hunt Association at Ossaga Farms, near Sharpsburg. Twenty-one classes are open for competition and about 250 entrants were listed. A feature of the days is the hunt cup race over two miles of natural hunting country.

Members of the show committee are Charles F. Colbert, Jr., chairman; George Pauli, H. G. Lytle, C. L. Flacrus, G. H. Cherrington and W. G. Costin.

Chaplin Poorer But Funnier, Says Rogers

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 17. — Just been over visiting Charlie Chaplin at his studio, and watching him work. I wanted to see how a man acted that had just been separated from a million. 2 Women Sought in Death

A hurried visit of two women who concealed their identity, to the office of Dr. H. D. Arthurs, of 637 Walnut street, McKeesport this morning, resulted in a probable identification of the man found dying in Renzie road, Elizabeth township, yesterday. The man, who died in the McKeesport Hospital without regaining consciousness is believed to be Eddie Brown, of Walnut street, McKeesport.

The women, whose names detectives have not learned, and James Doyle, of McKeesport, are being sought. County Detective James Reddington says he believes they were with Brown at the time he was injured. The women visited Dr. Arthurs' office to inquire about a man named Brown, indicating he was the man found in Renzie road.

most intimately say that he seems "to have a load off his mind, like a man looking forward to a needed rest." To this writer he acted and looked about the same as usual, talking little, thinking all the time. He is about the only man in Washington who does not ask you whom you think the Republicans will nominate, or any other question about politics.

MRS. COOLIDGE returned to Washington to meet the heat wave, temperature of 103 on Thursday. Washington adjusts itself to the weather. Nice little old ladies trot along, some times mumbling to themselves, with sensible loose hats that flap in the breeze—no iron clad, smothering blinkers of thick felt pulled down over eyes and ears.

They wear loose dresses that let their knees move freely, and some of the dresses even have ruffles on them, like dresses in Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Life is not expensive, compared with other American cities. You read in a restaurant window "good coffee with rich cream five cents a cup, a second cup free." They don't do that in New York or Chicago. There they give you some times "a second pair of pants free with every suit," but you pay for the "second pants" in the price of the suit.

WRECKED FLIERS SEEK ANOTHER RACE PLANE

(By International News Service.)

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Sept. 17.—Their racing plane City of Olympia No. 31, wrecked here last night, Lieut. Valentine Gephart, Seattle, Wash., and Pilot Fred Parker, Anderson, Ind., left this morning for Cleveland to procure a new plane in which they will contest in the New York-Spokane Air Derby Wednesday.

Gephart and Parker escaped death last night when their plane went dead above a hay field. Gephart leaped in a parachute from a height of 2,300 feet and Parker volplaned the ship to the ground, where it was badly damaged. Gephart landed in a tree and suffered minor injuries.

The two fliers had flown cross-country from Seattle.

KINGDON GOULD'S HOBBY MOTION PICTURE TAKING

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 17.—Kingdon Gould, vice president of the Texas Pacific Railroad, admitted on a visit here that his hobby is the taking of motion pictures. "I have taken hundreds of feet of films of our children and places we have visited," he said. "Every year I take pictures of the family. The film is carefully put away and will be of great interest to the children when they grow up."

WILL FIGHT WETS IN PARTY

By KENNETH CLARK,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—William Gibbs McAdoo announced today he would not be a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

He burned all his bridges behind him when he said definitely:

"I shall not be a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1928."

His refusal to enter the race was contained in a letter to George F. Milton, publisher of the Chattanooga News. Milton, publicity manager for McAdoo in 1924, had urged him to be a candidate again.

At the same time, McAdoo served notice that his political feud with Gov. Al Smith, of New York, which deadlocked the Democrats in 1924, is far from ended. He said he would continue to fight for the triumph of progressive principles in the party, and for the suppression of the nullificationists, or the wets.

WARNING TO PARTY.

A desire to free the party from a repetition of the disastrous 1924 fight, was advanced by McAdoo as one of his chief reasons for retiring. He said also that he had earned a respite, "an honorable discharge" from the rigors of active political life.

He warned the party that defeat lay ahead in 1928 if the next convention degenerated "into a mere struggle of individuals for personal preferment at the expense of principles and policies of fundamental importance to party character and to the welfare of the nation."

Indirectly, he advised the party to avoid the injection of the religious issue into the next campaign.

"In 1924," he said, "I entered the campaign because it was urged upon me that the Progressive element of the party relied upon me for leadership. You know how that campaign was rendered abortive by the unfortunate injection, against my opposition, of the false religious issue into the Democratic national convention."

The 1924 convention was broken wide open by a klan and anti-klan fight. It prevented any reconciliation between the factions represented by the two leading candidates, McAdoo and Smith.

McAdoo did not mention any persons who would be acceptable to him as candidates.

In urging McAdoo to run, Milton had said he would be "nominated by the party and elected by the people."

"From a careful survey of the nation," said Milton, "I am firmly convinced that the principles and progressive policies you advocated in 1924 have grown stronger, and that your own strength is greater; but you have remained silent on the presidency. Your thousands of friends throughout the country are eager to support you again, and are hoping for your announcement."

DRY HEADS, HERE, LAUD PENNINGTON

SEYMOUR LOWRMAN JOHN D. PENNINGTON DR. J. M. DORAN

Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of customs, prohibition and coast guard, came here yesterday to attend the testimonial luncheon given by temperance organizations in honor of John D. Pennington, local dry administrator. With him was Dr. J. M. Doran, national commissioner of prohibition, who was vehement in his denial that Pennington would resign as has been persistently rumored here for months. Both Washington officials were loud in their praise of Pennington and expressed a wish that they had a dozen more like him.

Mrs. Miller Will Fight To Jail Armstrong

A "one-man county commission," which, meeting by itself, adopted resolutions authorizing expeditures of over $1,000,000—this is County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong in the eyes of Mrs. J. O. Miller, president of the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters.

She made this characterization on her return here from Philadelphia, where she said she had procured additional evidence to support criminal charges she has lodged against Armstrong and his chief clerk, William H. Ziefel.

"I have been called a 'misguided woman' by Congressman Harry Estep," Mrs. Miller said. "Perhaps I am, and if I am, I am glad. In any event, I'm going to use every effort within my power to jail County Commissioner Armstrong.

"I have definite evidence to prove that March 28, 1925, Armstrong held a meeting of the 'board of county commissioners,' at which, in addition to creating more than 70 jobs in the Department of Public Works, resolutions were passed for the improvement of four county roads. The minutes of this meeting show that County Commissioner Addison C. Gumbert was present. All through the minutes he and Armstrong are shown alternating in making and seconding motions. And yet, as a matter of fact, Gumbert was in Cambridge Springs at the time.

"This meeting also provided for the construction of a roadway in Saw Mill run at the request of the city, although the city ordinance for the work was not passed until two days later."

Mrs. Miller declared that the meeting was only part of the evidence which she had, but was "just a sample of the actions of the august body which has managed our county and expended millions of taxpayers' money."

CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS, Pa., Sept. 17.—Here to confirm her charges that fraud was perpetrated by the Allegheny county board of commissioners, while the late Addison C. Gumbert, member of the board, was a patient at a hospital here, Mrs. J. O. Miller, of Pittsburgh, president of the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters, has departed, apparently satisfied with the results of her quest.

Mrs. Miller obtained records at the Wasson hotel, where Mr. Gumbert was a patient from March 28 to April 8, 1925, prior to his being taken back to Pittsburgh where he died in West Penn hospital a short time later. She also interviewed Dr. E. C. Wasson, owner of the hotel concerning Gumbert's stay here.

MAN, SHIELDING WOMAN, CUT

Earl Shoop, 45, of Springdale, was confined to his home today suffering from three serious stab wounds received last night when he ordered a foreigner, who had insulted a woman, to leave Cheswick. The foreigner drew a knife and stabbed Shoop, when the latter approached him, and then ran.

12TH WARD CLUB BANDITS GIVEN LONG TERMS

Five bandits who held up and robbed the Twelfth Ward Republican Club, East Liberty, last spring were given heavy penitentiary sentences when arraigned late yesterday before Judge J. Frank Graff of Armstrong county, in Criminal court.

Joseph Murphy, of 129 Collins avenue, leader of the gang, was sentenced to five to ten years. Three to six year terms were imposed upon Leslie Mauer, Michael Piccardo, Herbert Spencer and Frank Peroski, all of Detroit.

Shortly after the holdup, which netted the robbers $2,000 in club funds and $1,200 from members, the gang was arrested in Detroit. Maurer, Piccardo, Spencer and Peroski pleaded guilty. Murphy pleaded not guilty, but was convicted. The club was later raided in the Citizens League campaign against vice.

QUESTION WIFE'S ACCOUNT OF DOCTOR'S SLAYING

POLICE FIND HER GEMS AT SITE OF MURDER

HAMMONTON, N. J., Sept. 17.—(AP.)—Mrs. Margaret Lillendahl was at the Hammonton barracks of the state police today, while the police and county detectives continued their search for the revolver, which was used to kill her 65-year-old husband, Dr. A. William Lillendahl.

Dr. Lillendahl, a retired physician, was shot to death on a lonely road near Alsion, three and one-half miles north of here, Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Lillendahl told authorities that he was killed in defending her from two Negroes, who robbed her.

She was questioned for several hours Thursday evening and again yesterday afternoon. Frank J. Harrold, chief of Atlantic county detectives, said that her statements were not coherent.

A wrist watch and a ruby ring, which the women said were taken by the Negroes, were found near the spot where her husband was slain.

Charles M. Phillips, solicitor of the town of Hammonton, has been retained as counsel for Mrs. Lillendahl. He visited her several times yesterday but refused to comment other than to say that habeas corpus action would be taken if she were not released soon.

TRAIL 2 FLEEING SHOT-UP CAR

Police today were on the trail of two alleged automobile thieves who escaped from a bullet-riddled machine late yesterday when police brought it to a halt at Chartiers avenue and Tunker street, McKees Rocks. One member of the trio, who said he was Regis Judge, 21, 6168 Broad street, was captured at West Carson and Struben streets, and lodged in the Frankstown Avenue Police Station. An automobile race of more than three miles, in which police fired scores of shots, preceded the capture.

M'GOVERN QUIZZES FUND PROBE WITNESS

DENIED TAX RECEIPTS, IS CHARGE

Controller Charles C. McGovern spent considerable time this morning listening to witnesses tell how they were refused tax receipts at the county treasurer's office. He is shown questioning D. Carter, a Negro of the Fourth Ward. Sitting to the left are Mrs. Bertha Wielge, of 3453 Parkview avenue, Fred McCauley, of 3752 Frazier street and Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy, of 3616 Whitney street, all of the Fourth Ward. After testifying the witnesses were sent to the treasurer's office to get receipts.

AIDING SANTA CLAUS

FLY SEEKING REINDEER

Alaskan rangers are using airplanes to round up missing reindeer herds. Here are Boyne, an Eskimo guide and Walter, one of the rangers, in front of their plane after a 100-mile flight in 1½ hours. They combed the hills and valleys for straying herds and accomplished as much in that short time as they could have done in two weeks on foot. They report Santa will have plenty of animals to choose from for his annual excursion.

WOMAN SEEKS $50,000 FOR AUTO HURTS

Alice Russell filed a suit for $50,000 against Carl Beck for personal injuries suffered when she was struck by an automobile November 16, 1925, at Versailles avenue and Cornell street, McKeesport. She avers she will be permanently crippled.

Sam Mirkin and Esther Mirkin, his wife, entered suit for $15,000 damages for personal injuries suffered when their automobile collided with a machine driven by Mike Pavlich in Youngstown, O., on August 15, 1925. In another action the couple sue the same defendant for $15,000 for injuries to their minor children, Minnie, 5, and Sam, 19 months, injured in the same accident.

Bessie Sobel and Henry Sobel ask $60,000 damages from Julius Foster. They allege that while Mrs. Sobel was a guest passenger in the automobile of Foster last May 31 the machine upset and rolled over an embankment. She suffered four fractured ribs and other internal injuries. She asks $30,000 and her husband $10,000.

Alleging that his minor son, Richard Murphy, while playing in the yard of Patrick Stocke on September 11, last, was attacked and bitten by an Airedale dog and will be disfigured for life, Francis Murphy asks $10,000 damages from Stocke.

Chester Toski filed a suit for damages against James Edward for $10,000. He alleges that last July 20 the defendant suffered injuries when hit by Edward's automobile.

HIKING CLUB PLANS 6-MILE JAUNT SUNDAY

The Pittsburgh Hiking Club will hike six miles along Plum Creek this Sunday starting at the Iron Bridge, Verona. J. J. Hommel, leader, will meet a train leaving Wilkinsburg Station at 1:15 p. m.

POLICEMAN HELD FOR BOUNCING CANDIDATE

City Patrolman Joseph (Boss) Lavery was at liberty today under $1,000 bond posted for a hearing before Justice of the Peace John Popp, Jr., of Castle Shannon, on charges of assault and battery. The charges were preferred by John W. Murphy, independent Republican candidate for Recorder of Deeds, as a result of an alleged attack upon him, his son, Franklin, and James Lenigan, 21, of 2023 Plainview avenue, in the Republican organization headquarters yesterday. The three were arrested by Lavery when they attempted to pass out Murphy's campaign cards in the organization headquarters. Bail for Lavery was furnished by Alderman John J. Verona.

M'GOVERN REPLY GIVEN C. OF C.

County Controller Charles C. McGovern's answer to the questionnaire of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce sub-committee on municipal affairs was in the hands of the sub-committee today. The answer is, in effect, a summary of the controller's annual report published recently. It also sets forth measures proposed by McGovern to correct the present financial conditions of the county.

FILES HABEAS WRIT TO REGAIN CHILDREN

Attorney Waldo P. Breeden filed a petition in Common Pleas Court for a writ of habeas corpus directed to his wife, Jane Breeden, for the custody of the Breeden children, Waldo P., Jr., and Juaniat E. Breeden. The court fixed Tuesday, September 23, for a hearing. The Breedens are separated and a divorce action is pending.

Says Treasurer Holds Up Tax Receipts

The public audit of county fiscal affairs has taken on the aspect of a clearing house for complaints from many sources other than those indicated when County Controller C. C. McGovern began his check-up on the manner in which the County Commissioners are handling the public moneys.

Fourth Ward residents late yesterday appealed to the controller during the audit hearing to aid them in securing tax receipts which they alleged had been refused them by the county treasurer. Representing the Fourth Ward contingent was Attorney M. B. Cohen, who exhibited 1,060 orders for taxes executed to Alderman John Carr, which were presented with $2,000 in cash to the chairman of the county Republican organization, held two weeks and returned with no reason given for non-acceptance by the county treasurer, it was testified.

County Treasurer S. D. Foster, testifying at the controller's hearing, said he was not aware that tax receipts had been refused in his office up to August 31 without a legal reason being given. He disclaimed jurisdiction over the delinquent tax office other than authority to name and remove its head. Walter J. Christy is collector of delinquent taxes.

Several witnesses were called to verify the claim that tax orders had been presented at the Treasurer's office and receipts refused.

Further testimony was given yesterday in the matter of payrolls for extra work at elections. McGovern had threatened James Routley, assistant clerk in the County Commissioners office, with jail for failure to produce the payroll records. Routley and the solicitor for the Commissioners finally submitted all the payrolls demanded by the Controller.

'One Long Hop' Keeps Tradition, Also Honors Lindy

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—A government narcotic agent, George M. Belcove, was responsible today for this story:

Lee Long, Chinese merchant here, and his wife scratched their heads for many days trying to think of a good name for their baby, born two days after Col. Lindbergh's epoch flight.

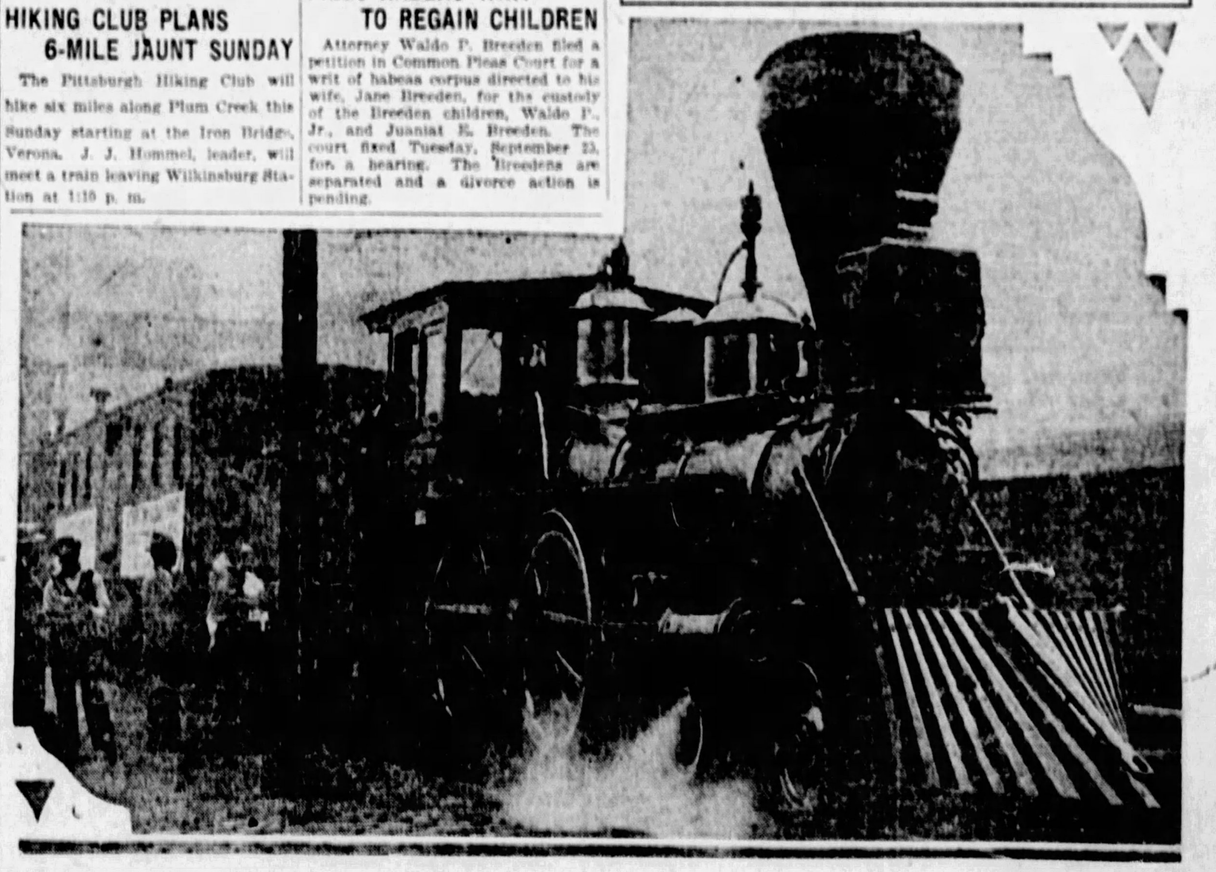
Eager to show their patriotism and pride in their adopted land, they still wanted to pay respect to Chinese tradition. An inspiration came.

The baby was called "One Long Hop."

CHILD BADLY SCALDED IN FALL INTO TUB

Robert Swanger, 2, son of R. W. Swanger, of West Elizabeth, was reported to be in a serious condition in the McKeesport hospital today suffering from scalds of the head and body. He fell into a tub of hot water while playing in the kitchen of his home.

"IRON HORSE" OF 50s



DRAWS TWO TINY CARS

The William Crooks, brass-trimmed, wood-burning Iron Horse of yesterday's frontier days, the wheezy little locomotive which wrote a new chapter in history when it triumphantly steamed into St. Paul 76 years ago, chugged through Pittsburgh over the Baltimore & Ohio tracks on its way to Baltimore for the railroad's centenary celebration. The William Crooks, retired in 1908 after 50 years of service, was the first locomotive in the Northwest, frightening Indians and deer on the 10-mile line of the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad. It is drawing two tiny passenger cars. F. Berg, road foreman of engines for the Baltimore & Ohio, is riding on the engine as far as Cumberland.

Roland Drew, New Screen Find, Turns Out to Be Walter Goss, Who Is Movie School Graduate

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.

GILBERT ROLAND does a repeat performance in "The Woman Disputed" as Norma Talmadge's leading man. This will make his third picture with Miss Talmadge, and rather effectively settles the discussion as to where he will next park his make-up box.

Norma might be said to have made young Roland, who was unknown until he played in "Camille" and "The Dove." Now without any exaggeration I think I can say he is one of the most sought after leading men in the movies. Rightly so, too, because in addition to being a fine screen personality he has a certain amount of ability.

There is a strong possibility that Lowell Sherman, who was featured in "The Woman Disputed" when it played on Broadway may have the same role on the screen. I suppose in that case the Roland part will be built up. Agnes Christine Johnston, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's contract writer has been borrowed by Joseph Schenck to write the screenplay. This only carries out my contention that we shall see a working arrangement in the future between the two companies.

Fred Niblo who wielded the megaphone in "Camille," will again direct Norma.

Here is a laugh. Roland Drew, widely publicized by the Edwin Carewe company as a former newspaperman and a newcomer to the screen is none other than Walter Goss. I do not know whose brilliant idea it was to cast him as Felipe in "Ramona" and then try to hide his identity, but I think whoever did it is suffering from an inflated nerve center. True Goss has not had much of a break in the movies, but it is the height of absurdity to try and foist him off as a discovery under a new name. Edwin Carewe is old enough to know it cannot be done. He should be wise enough not to let anyone talk him into such a fool idea. Goss was formerly on a metropolitan daily. He was one of the Paramount graduates who went to Hollywood to try and conquer the movies. And so far the obstacles have been many.

Will Rogers, humorist, philosopher, reporter, actor, congressman and Beverly Hills mayor, is about to add a new accomplishment to his long list. He has been engaged by Sam Rork to write the titles for "The Texas Steer," in which he is starred. I think it is safe to promise that wherever there is the possibility for a laugh, Rogers will get it. Yet he may not be so funny as a title writer. I have known some of our best humorists to fall down flat when it comes to wit on the screen.

Has Actress Role

POLA NEGRI plays the title role in "Rachel," a photoplay based on the life of that noted French tragedienne of the last century.

Another Henry

TAYLOR HOLMES is the Henry of the first Henry and Polly comedy, entitled "Should a Mason Tell?"

And His Polly

LEAH BAIRD is the Polly to the Henry of Mr. Holmes, being co-starred in the frivol, "Should a Mason Tell?"

Right at Home

SUNDAY MIDNITE SHOW

MUSICAL FROLIC AMONG BILLS

"Rose-Marie," which returns to the Alvin for one week only, beginning Monday evening, matinees Wednesday and Saturday, is described as a refreshing return to the "golden days" of musical comedy when melodies lilted and dimpled music with tunefulness and meaning, a measure of acting, good singing, youth, coherence and decency to the theater. The dance arrangements have a record of chorus patterns and steps that are always effective, without a bare skin or immodesty, outdoing all the daring of the undress shows.

Monday night will bring to the Nixon the first presentation in Pittsburgh of Gregorio and Maria Martinez Sierra's famous comedy of modern Spanish life, "The Cradle Song." The occasion will also mark the first production in this city of a play sponsored by the Civic Repertory Theater of New York, of which Eva Le Gallienne is the founder and director.

As Agnes Delova, fiance of the district attorney in Willard Mack's "Honor Be Damned" in the Pitt next week, Anne Forrest will have a particularly appealing role. Thurston Hall will be seen as the district attorney. There will be three matinees—Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Included in the Keith-Albee vaudeville in the Davis next week will be a playlet in which Franz McLynn, who played the title role in John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," will appear in a Lincoln characterization.

It is the experience of Bert Bertrand, star of "Wine, Woman and Song" coming to the Gayety next week, that an audience responds as heartily to a joke about the ladies as a wink whom about the men. He has come to show it through the large accession of women to the public attending the musical frolics on the Columbia circuit.

Next week's bill in the Academy will be "Happy Hours," in which Harry Stratton and Edith Palmer are among the principals.

KENNYWOOD TO CLOSE WITH SUNDAY MUSIC

Tonight in Kennywood Park patrons will dance for the last time of this season. Tomorrow the big playground will officially terminate its twenty-eighth year. After Sunday the big park will be boarded up to public patronage until early next spring.

This evening Bob McGowan's Radio Players will play for the closing dance and tomorrow Danny Nirella with his red coats will render the final concert. "Auld Lang Syne" is to be the musical motif. Novelties of vocal and instrumental nature are contained on Nirella's program. Bathing and the amusements are to be conducted, offering the last chance to partake of these attractions.

Kennywood's 1928 improvement program calls for much betterment. Park officials state April 15, 1928, has been tentatively selected for reopening. Renovating and remodeling will begin early this fall.

MENDELSSOHN CHOIR REHEARSES TUESDAY

Rehearsals of the Mendelssohn choir will begin Tuesday evening, September 20, in the rehearsal room of Carnegie Music Hall. The secretary reports a large number of applicants for membership in the organization and nearly 100 per cent return of the membership of the past season.

The first concert of the season takes place November 15, the works to be presented including Dvorak's "Stabat Mater" and Mozart's "Requiem."

Griffith Is Making New Film In Hollywood

After a prolonged stay throughout the East and in Europe, where he made many of his film epics, D. W. Griffith is producing his first Hollywood-made motion picture in over eight years. He is the last of the irreconcilables to return and admit that Hollywood is the production mecca of the world.

Griffith has chosen as his first of a series of romantic episodes which he is to make for United Artists, "The Drums of Love," a gripping story of chivalry, feudal warfare and brother love in the Americas below the equator.

Lionel Barrymore and Don Alvarado respectively play the roles of the tyrant and his brother, whose vows to uphold each other's honor are broken and healed again through the love of a captive maiden, portrayed by Mary Philbin.

In support of them are Tully Marshall, Eugenie Besserer, William Austin, Rosemary Cooper, Charles Hill Mailes, Sydney de Grey, Barbara de Bonsky, Joyce Coad and Rosa Rosanova.

Carmelita Makes Rapid Journey to Studio

A new time record has been set for traveling from the United Artists lot to Mack Sennett's studio. Hollywood's most widely separated film factories.

It all happened because Carmelita Geraghty, who played in Mary Pickford's "My Best Girl," was wanted on the Pickford set and the Sennett lot, where she is working in a two-reeler with Billy Bevan and Vernon Dent, at the same time. Miss Pickford's assistant director had promised to have Carmelita at Sennett's by 1 o'clock and then asked for a half hour extension so that the production could be completed.

The extension of time was granted and at 1:25 there was no Carmelita. Suddenly there was a rocket as if all the fire departments in town were bearing down on the Sennett studio. Up dashed two motorcycle cops with a big police car bearing Carmelita between them.

They had covered the distance in seven minutes.

ANNA MAY WONG GETS ROLE IN 'DEVIL DANCER'

Anna May Wong has been signed for "The Devil Dancer," starring Gilda Grey, Sojin, Michael Vavitch James Leong, Anne Schaeffer, Martha Mattox, Albert Conti and Barbara Tennant have also been engaged for the picture which Sam Goldwyn is producing.

Dog, Valued At $50,000, New Film Star

Every dog has his day might be paraphrased to read every movie company has his dog. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is about to introduce a new canine to the motion picture world in Flash, who is described as having more sense than the average human. Most dogs do. He is a police shepherd and has been in training for two years for this very occasion. "The Dog of War," by Norman Houston, will introduce him to his public. And he will have in his cast such celebrities as Marceline Day and Ralph Forbes. Harry Rapf thinks so highly of Flash that he refused $50,000 for him. Mr. Rapf will supervise his career in the movies.

Holmes Herbert Added to Cast of New Film

The last minute news from the Hollywood studios places Holmes Herbert in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" as the millionaire reformer who marries Lorelei. If you can believe everything, he is said to be Anita Loos' choice. George Stone who played the "rat" in "Seventh Heaven" has been invited to do his stuff in "The Come Back," Monte Blue's next Warner classic. Neil Hart, former Western hero, is staging a comeback in "The Outcast," a Western for Pathe. Lucille Irwin has the feminine lead and Mr. Hart himself is the director. FBO is giving Cleve Moore, a brother of Colleen, a change in "The Summer Hero," featuring Duane Thompson and Hugh Trevor.

English Actress In Sennett Pictures

Dahlne Pollard, English stage comedienne who was recently brought to this country by Mack Sennett to appear in a new series of bathing girl films, is wearing a swimming suit for the first time.

Miss Pollard almost upset the morale of the entire company, she looked so funny the first time she walked on the set wearing a bathing suit that was in vogue before the Kaiser got his idea about being a second Napoleon.

The London actress is now appearing in her second comedy, supported by Madeline Hurlock, Lyge Connolly, and a bevy of bathing girls.

WANTED TO SEE IT BURN

HAROLD MONHEIMER

An irresistible desire to see flames and attendant excitement is the only reason state police can assign for the incendiarism of Harold Monheimer, 32, college man and salesman, Chicago, following his arrest in Webster Hall for fires started in a number of out-of-town hotels. He is held at Greensburg, pending the arrival of relatives.

Guest Soloist

MATT W. WEBBER

Tenor soloist at Chicago Temple, Mr. Webber will be heard as guest soloist at Shadyside Presbyterian Church at both services tomorrow.

BIBLE CLASS OBSERVES 22ND YEAR TOMORROW

The Neighborhood Men's Bible Class, an undenominational organization, will observe the twenty-second anniversary of its foundation, with the opening of this year's service Sunday afternoon in St. Luke's Lutheran Church, St. Luke's square, North side. The class originally was for men only, but in the last few years numerous women have been admitted. Dr. John McNaugher, president of the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, is the class teacher.

MEMORIAL SERVICES FOR EAST END CHURCH SINGER

A memorial service in honor of T. Earle Yearsley, late tenor soloist of the East End Christian Church, will be held Sunday night in the East End Christian Church, South Highland avenue. The service will be conducted by the Rev. John Ray Ewers, pastor. Mr. Yearsley organized the vested choir of the church. A musical program will be arranged by Margaret Stoerkel Wilhelm.

BAPTISTS MARK 25TH BIRTHDAY

A week of special services marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Johnston Avenue Baptist Church will be started tomorrow morning when home-coming day will be observed. O. C. Riley, a church officer, will speak on church history. The services are under the direction of the Rev. J. A. T. Marsteller, pastor.

Monday night will be home night, with addresses by six neighbor ministers. Tuesday night will be university night, the principal speaker being Charles T. Ball, president of the Eastern Baptist University of Philadelphia. Wednesday night will be seminary night, with a banquet for alumni of Crozier Theological Seminary. Milton G. Evans, president of the seminary, will speak.

Thursday will be missionary night, and a social hour. The speaker will be the Rev. Dr. Oliver Sisson of the Wilkinsburg Baptist Church. The Rev. Dr. Carl Wallace Petty, pastor of the First Baptist Church, will be the speaker Friday night, which will be known as denominational night.

NEW PASTOR AT ST. PETER'S

The Rev. Waldo A. Amos, for nine years welfare director in New York, will preach his first sermon as pastor of St. Peter's Episcopal church, Forbes street and Craft avenue, tomorrow. Amos arrived in Pittsburgh yesterday.

Mr Amos received his bachelor of arts degree from Columbia University in 1906 and his degree of bachelor of Divinity in 1909 at the Episcopal Theological Seminary, Cambridge, Mass. After serving several years as assistant rector at Holy Trinity church, New York City, he accepted a call to St. Paul's Church, Hoboken, N. J., where he founded the Wahlbein-Stevens Forum, an educational institution. He left this charge as a Red Cross chaplain during the World War.

and Dressmakers' Exhibit

A SPACIOUS, airy Auditorium, on our top floor, with chairs for 1,200 people—a greater seating capacity than most theaters—with stage and acoustical arrangements that all may see and hear, provides a favorable setting for the telling of Autumn's Fashion Story to Pittsburgh, next week under the joint auspices of the Horne Fabric Sections and local Dressmakers.

There will be two performances daily—

10:30 A.M. 2:30 P.M.

The new fabrics, made up in approved styles by Pittsburgh dressmakers, will be displayed for your inspection on living models, while a competent stylist will explain the mode and details of each.

All the materials are from our stocks. The finished garments suggest the smart uses to which they may be put. Unsurpassed facilities for employing these suggestions are provided in the special services listed below. Patterns for making every model in the style show are here for home sewers—or competent Pittsburgh dressmakers stand ready to duplicate any desired model at moderate cost. Come Monday morning for the premiere, at which Pittsburgh dressmakers will be guests of honor, and at which Mary Bidwell Breed, Director of the Margaret Morrison School, Carnegie Institute of Technology, will speak.

Special Services

Free Cutting: Two experienced dressmakers will be at your disposal to cut materials purchased here, without charge.

Pattern Representatives: Vogue, Pictorial Review, Home Journal, and Butterick will have experts here to assist in the choice of patterns.

Sewing Machine Demonstration: A manufacturer's representative will be on the balcony to demonstrate the use of attachments, etc.

Fabric Demonstrations: Various manufacturers of materials are sending delegates to demonstrate their fabrics.

Dressmakers Available: You will find the names and addresses of all the participating dressmakers on the back of the program, if you would like to have any of them make something for you. The fall edition of Joseph Horne Co. Dressmakers' Directory, listing the addresses and rates of some 200 dressmakers of the vicinity, is obtainable in all Fabric Sections, on request.

THE SUN TELEGRAPH MELODY WAY CLUB

SECOND LESSON

Copyright, 1927, by W. Otto Miessner

Did you join the procession of Music Makers last week on the Road to Music along the Melody Way? I trust you found it interesting, easy and pleasant.

Let us review the steps you have taken up to this point.

1. You have learned to feel time
   (a) By speaking the words of two pieces
   (b) By marching and tapping with the feet
   (c) By drumming the rhythm of the Melody on the table as you count one, two; one, two
2. You know the tone-names of the Melody
3. You know the letter names of the Key Board
4. You know the names of your fingers
5. You know how to use your fingers using
   (a) Arm weight touch
   (b) Forward rocking thrust
   (c) Sideways rotating motion
6. You can play the Melody on the Key Board and at the piano
   (a) With the Right Hand
   (b) With the Left Hand

Follow the Notes

If you have succeeded in playing "Magic Music" in the Left Hand Melody as well as the Right Hand smoothly and evenly you may now try it with each hand separately while your eyes follow the notes.

The notes for the Right Hand Melody are on the five-line staff above the words. Over each note is the number of the finger you must use. Under each word is the tone-name of the musical scale which is sung to it. Remember that, in these first pieces, each finger always plays the same Melody tone. Therefore, when you speak or sing the tone-name of a note it will help you to use the right finger for it.

Quarter and Half Notes

Notice that some of the note-heads are black while others are white. The black-head note is called a quarter note and gets one tap or count. The white-head note is called a half note and gets two taps or counts.

It will help you to learn "To A River" (your new piece for today) if you will first practice the following motifs from "Magic Music." Memorize them by repeating the tone-names and the letter-names. Also play them on the table and at the Key Board. Ask some one to point to the motifs, skipping about, while you name and play them instantly without a break.

When you read and play these music-motifs you will know tone-words just as you know the English words that you are reading in this lesson. You will enjoy finding these motifs in many other pieces, although they may appear in a different order. Knowing them by hand, by sound and by sight will help you to learn many new pieces. You will be pleased to find some of them in your next piece "To A River."

"To A River"

There are four short phrases in this piece for the Right Hand and then the same four phrases are played by the Left Hand. The new thing you must learn to do is to play the four eighth notes which are played two to each tap or count, like this:

Feel the Time

Tap—		Heel	Toe	Heel	Toe
Count—		1	2	1	2
	(1)	River	ever	flow	ing
		Do Re	Mi Fa	So	Mi
	(2)	Flow	ing	flow	ing
		So	Mi	So	Mi
	(3)	River	ever	grow	ing
		Do Re	Mi Fa	So	Mi
	(4)	From a	tiny	rill	—
		So Fa	Mi Re	Do	—

You may now try to play each phrase, without stopping, first playing the Right Hand, then the Left Hand. Then you may try playing the Melody with both hands together. R. H. means Right Hand, L. H. means Left Hand.

First—On the Table.
Second—On the paper Key-Board.
Third—At the Piano.

FIRST PHRASE

Words—	(1)	Riv	er	ev	er		flow	ing
Tones—		Do	Re	Mi	Fa		So	Mi
R. H.—		1	2	3	4		5	3

SECOND PHRASE

Words—	(2)	Flow	ing		flow	ing
Tones—		So	Mi		So	Mi
R. H.		5	3		5	3

THIRD PHRASE

Words—	(3)	Riv	er	ev	er		grow	ing
Tones—		Do	Re	Mi	Fa		So	Mi
R. H.—		1	2	3	4		5	3

FOURTH PHRASE

Words—	(4)	From	a	ti	ny		rill	—
Tones—		So	Fa	Mi	Re		Do	—
R. H.—		5	4	3	2		1	—

The figure, So Mi, may be played with the rotating hand touch.

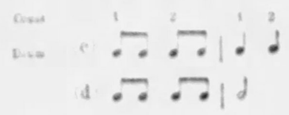
Tap—		Heel	Toe	Heel	Toe
Count—		1	2	1	2
	(5)	Are you	nev er	qui	et
	(6)	Qui	et	qui	et
	(7)	Are you	nev er	qui	et
	(8)	Are you	nev er	still?	—

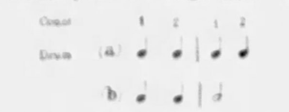
Since the Melody for the Left Hand is exactly like the Right Hand Melody you should now be able to play this by following the words and tone names as found in the printed piece. Notice that the music page shows the words, the tones, the fingers and the notes.

Drum the Rhythm

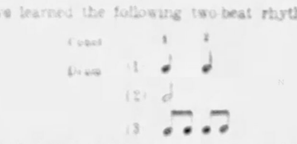
You should practice drumming the new rhythms in "To A River." The figures of two notes, with a horizontal bar joining the stems, are two eighth notes, played two to one count.



Also practice drumming the two "Magic Music" rhythms:



You now have learned the following two-beat rhythmic figures:



See how many four-beat motifs you can make up by arranging these figures in different orders.

Read the Notes

After you have played the Melody, "To A River" with each hand the following three ways:

1. On the Table.
2. On the Key Board.
3. At the Piano.

you should repeat this while your eyes follow the notes. Learn to know, at a single glance, the three melodic groups called motifs, which make up the whole piece.

Motifs from "To A River"

Now, find each of these motifs, every time it appears in "To A River." Set each motif apart from the rest of the music in the complete piece by framing it between the index fingers of your two hands. This will train your eyes to see at once all the notes of the group, which may be a motif or a figure. As your eyes "catch" each motif at a glance (like a printed word) repeat aloud:

1. The tone names
2. The letter names
3. The finger numbers.

Review

Let us review a few things we have learned, so far.

The rhythm is the "go" or movement which you can speak, drum, clap or play.

A phrase is a bit of melody set to one line of the poem.

A motif is part of a phrase but enough of the tune to remind you of the piece to which it belongs.

A figure usually has only two, three or four tones that make musical sense but may occur in many pieces, like So, Mi; Mi, Do.

A measure is a group of two, three, four or more taps, counts or beats, indicated by bars.

The measure sign at the beginning describes the kind of measure used. The upper number tells how many beats in each measure. The lower number tells which kind of note gets one count.

A quarter note usually gets one count.
A half note usually gets two counts.
The treble clef is used on the staff for the higher notes, generally for those above (to the right of) Middle C.
The bass clef is used on the staff for the lower notes, generally for those below (to the left of) Middle C.

Poetical and Musical Form

In Poetry, one line is called a verse.
In Music, the tune to one line is a phrase.
In Poetry, two lines are called a couplet.
In Music, two phrases are called a section.
In Poetry, four lines are called a stanza.
In Music, four phrases are called a period.

It will be a great help to you to learn the form of a piece of music. Surely, you have observed that in Poetry, certain lines rhyme. Sometimes the first and second, also the third and fourth lines rhyme. We might call these lines A A, B B.

A— Twinkle, twinkle, lit-tle star, —
A— How I won-der what you are —
B— Up a-bove the world so high —
B— Like a dia-mond in the sky —

Compare this with "Magic Music" and you will see that, in this piece the first and third, also the second and fourth lines rhyme. These lines then, might be called A B A B. Rhymes make poetry easier to remember than prose.

For this reason, it will be easy for you to memorize music pieces if you think of them as arranged in forms made up of phrases, sections and periods. You think the music in phrases, instead of as separate notes.

Also, it will be much easier to read and learn to play new pieces if you first analyse or study the form. You will usually find that some phrases are repeated. Knowing this, you can recognize a repeated phrase at one single glance.

In your third lesson, next week, you will learn how to play the chords that go with the Melodies of "Magic Music" and "To A River." You may begin to study these now as they appear at the bottom of the printed music of the first two lessons. The Melody Chord Finder will make it very easy to find these two chords. Maybe you will be clever enough to find out for yourself how to play them! Anyway, it's worth trying.

Also, next week, you will learn to play the prettiest piece of all, so far. It is a French Melody called "Little Wooden Shoes." In France, millions of boys and girls know and love this tune. Gradually it has spread to nearly all other countries.

Next week, too, you will begin to play your pieces in different keys, that is, with Do starting on G or on C, or, in fact, on any key. The Melody Key Finder makes it easy to play in all keys. You simply slide the Key Finder to the right or left so that Do falls on the key in which you want to play.

Major Scale

Do Re Mi Fa So La Ti Do

With the Key Finder you will quickly learn all the major scales, simply by moving the Key Finder so that Do lies over the key in which the piece is written. It is the key-note, Do, or one, of the major scale, that names the major key. For example, if Do, or one, begins on A, then the piece or song is said to be in the key of A Major.

Maybe you will be curious enough to try this out, too, beforehand! You may be sure of this: There are good times ahead for the boys and girls of The Melody Way Club!

The Most Brilliant Social Asset Is the Ability to Play the Piano

Acquire the ability to play the piano and you will never lack friends. For the greatest of all gifts will be yours—the ability to entertain, to bring pleasure, to comfort, and to inspire with music. Such a man or woman is always popular, always sought after, whether his music be that of the great classics or the foot-itching rhythm of today's jazz.

Every child deserves the privilege of a piano education. When you give this knowledge to your children, you provide them with a permanent source of attraction and lay the foundation of undying happiness.

Today's pianos are made to fit every type of room and every size of purse—grand pianos, baby grands, uprights, and player pianos with their repertoire of the world's greatest music.

Stop in at the show rooms of these piano merchants, and learn how easy and inexpensive it is to give your family this wealth of happiness and culture—a piano.

CANDIDATES RENEW ATTACKS

BABCOCK RAPS M'GOVERN ON BOND DELAY

The final registration day found the rival candidates for office hammering away at their opponents.

The torrent of words that has poured forth will end today, several small meetings being scheduled by the Republican organization. Most of the independents will end their speaking campaigns at a mass meeting in the Penn McKee Hotel, McKeesport, tonight.

"Every section of this county is being penalized to further the political ambition of its obstructing controller," declared Commissioner E. V. Babcock at an organization meeting in North Side Carnegie Hall, going on to name a dozen or more improvements for which bonds have been authorized.

"These bonds the controller either has deliberately neglected or refused to sell," said Babcock. "Pittsburgh has a glaring example of how this single obstructionist is retarding progress right in the heart of the city. Every building on Grant street, when it was widened, was promptly moved back to the new lines except the Court House. The non-removal of the Court House steps creates a menace to pedestrians and drivers, due to the lack of a pavement on Grant street. This cannot be remedied until the controller sells the bonds."

Controller C. C. McGovern kept his campaign to the fore by a statement signed by two former controllers saying that, in their opinion, he has "established prima facie cases of malfeasance and malpractice" on the part of county officials. Their statement blamed the opposition to McGovern on "a corrupt and expedient partisanship."

The two former controllers are Josiah Speer, who served from 1882 to 1890, and is now a candidate for county commissioner, and Franklin P. Booth, who served from 1904 to 1908.

FOSTER RAPS M'GOVERN

County Treasurer Samuel D. Foster, organization candidate for recorder of deeds, compared McGovern to the "rookie" soldier, whose mother remarked as the parade passed: "They are all out of step but Charlie."

"We are all out of step in the courthouse except this controller, who is not there by election by the people, but by appointment by Gov. Pinchot, and who seems to think he has nothing to do but find fault with the elected officials," said Foster.

Commissioner Armstrong, given an ovation by his neighbors of the South Side at a meeting in Turner Hall, South Thirteenth street, told his audience that "the stories you have been reading about the financial conditions of the county are the delusions of a man who does not know and does not want to know the truth."

"Neither faked-up figures of political audits nor baseless attacks from professional holdbacks can wipe away the tunnels, the roads and the bridges," he said. "Progress and improvement are not extravagances. On the heels of every public improvement comes a flood of private improvements that adds to the tax valuation, increasing revenue to meet the cost of well-advised public projects."

JUDGE FIGHT WARM

The judiciary fight likewise waxed warm.

"Judge Richard W. Martin is the one man who ought to be returned to the bench," said Attorney George R. Wallace, former president of the Chamber of Commerce, yesterday. Judge Martin himself, speaking at his town meeting, said:

"The people of Allegheny county want a judge who is free from the possibility of political influence. I have not allowed, and I will not allow, politics to influence me in the slightest degree in the performance of my duties."

The re-election of the four senior judges—Cohen, Ford, Carnahan and Swearingen—was urged in a statement issued last night by former Attorney General George E. Alter, who said:

"To have them fail of election would be a serious misfortune in breaking our traditional policy under which a judge once elected in this county is assured of continued re-election during good conduct. This helps to induce good men to go on the bench."

District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner, speaking at a testimonial meeting to Judge Ford in Etna last night, accused independent judicial candidates of urging their hearers to "plump" for them. "A candidate that makes such an appeal, said Gardner, "is just saying to the people: 'Make me a judge and I don't care how badly beaten every other judge is.'"

Sylvester Bierman, aldermanic candidate in the Fourteenth Ward, was forced to turn over his campaign to his friends when he was confined to his home by orders of his physician. An injury to his leg proved more serious than was anticipated, and he was ordered to rest.

R. E. Zuker, aldermanic candidate, petitioned the court yesterday to have the sheriff take possession of the Seventh Ward ballot boxes, instead of delivering them to the office of Alderman Charles A. Burke, another candidate there.

West Campbell presided at a meeting of colored citizens of the Eighth and Eleventh Wards last night in East End Carnegie Library. John T. Matthews, William D. Grimes, Mrs. W. W. Robinson, vice chairman of the Eleventh Ward committee; William M. Randolph, E. C. Chalfant and Elder W. Marshall, were the speakers. Mrs. Anna M. Winner, independent councilmanic candidate, left when the chairman announced that the meeting was for "Regular Republican" speakers only.

RAPS WOMEN SMOKERS

MME. AMELITA GALLI CURCI

"There isn't one good excuse for smoking," the songbird said in an Atlantic City interview yesterday. "It is harmful to the voice, discolors a woman's teeth and hands and is detrimental to her beauty. One of her beauty secrets is dieting. "I myself eat only a small breakfast, a substantial dinner and very little supper. I refrain from eating desserts but eat plenty of fruit and drink a quart of milk daily.

OFFICER LEAVES FOR PRISONER

A bench warrant and extradition papers were signed yesterday in Criminal Court by Judge James B. Macfarlane for Fred S. Sahada, of Brookline, arrested in New York on a charge of false pretense for representing himself as George Sahada, of Dormont, a cousin in poor health at the time, February 27, and who subsequently died, in obtaining a life insurance policy of $5,000 and attempt to collect as beneficiary.

FIRST AL SMITH CLUB IS FORMED IN N. C.

ALLIES BLVD. EXTENSION CONTRACT GIVEN BY CITY

The first of a number of contracts for the extension of the Boulevard of the Allies was let yesterday by Director of Public Works Edward Lang. Austin Givens won a contract of $1,089.75 for the demolition of a number of frame structures along the proposed route.

ENLIST CLUBS TO AID SYMPHONY SOCIETY

Organization of "club groups" of members in the Pittsburgh Symphony Society for its 1927-28 season began today giving impetus to the Society's membership drive.

Following an address by Attorney Edward E. Specter, manager of the Society, at a luncheon, the Co-Operative Club started the "club group" plan by appointing one of its board to canvass all other members. Literature concerning the society was sent out with a request that as many Co-Operators as possible join so that they might attend the concerts in a body. Other service clubs also have indicated that they will conduct a similar campaign.

Five classes of membership are available. These are Class A members paying dues of $5; Class B, dues $10; Class C, dues $; Active, dues $25, and Contributing, dues $100 or more. All members receive two tickets free to each concert. Three concerts will be given at Syria Mosque with world-famous artists and conductors.

The permanency of the Symphony orchestra for Pittsburgh rests largely on the result of the present membership campaign, officials of the society, 422 Bakewell building, declare.

LOEW LEAVES WIFE MOST IN WILL

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The will of Marcus Loew, president of Loew's Incorporated and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, was filed today in the Surrogate's Court. It bequeaths the major part of his vast estate to his wife, Caroline. The remainder is to be divided between his two sons, David and Arthur.

The document was drawn May 7, 1912. During his lifetime Mr. Loew divided large portions of his estate among his immediate family, which explains why no later document was drawn.

Twenty-five per cent of the estate is bequeathed to the widow, 15 per cent to his son, Arthur M., and the same amount to his second son, David. Forty per cent is set aside in a trust fund, the income of which will be paid to the widow. Upon her death the principal will be inherited by the sons.

A trust fund of 5 per cent of the estate has also been provided. The income of this will go to Mrs. Fannie Spring, sister of Mrs. Loew. Upon her death the principal will go to Mr. Loew's brother, Henry Loew, his half-brother, Joseph Bichel and his nephew Morton Spring in equal shares.

Melody Way Complimentary Piano Lessons—

CO-OPERATING with The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, piano instruction is given in our Piano Department on the Eleventh Floor by Expert Teachers. Formerly it was necessary to secure a Piano and go through months of practice before one could discover Musical Talent.

With the "Melody Way," talent appears at once after a few short lessons, or else it is shown that it is not there. It enables you to make sure the child has talent before you invest in the piano.

Ford Amazed Over Public's Interest; Fishers Active.

By B. C. FORBES

I HAVE just enjoyed a two days' visit to the Ford plants at Detroit and rational talks with Mr. Ford as well as his right-hand men. On Monday I hope to tell something of what I saw and learned.

"I don't know why people are so much interested in what we are doing," was one of Mr. Ford's first remarks after a friendly greeting.

"I notice that you have given the place of honor among the names of famous men carved across the front of this building to Mr. Edison. I replied. "Didn't you do this because people have always been tremendously interested in the things Edison has done?" It's because he has done most unusual things that the people have been interested. It is the same in your case you have done things no other man has done and now you are planning to do something else on a very big scale."

It would be safe to say that never in the history of American industry has any product been awaited with half the interest which the impending new Ford has aroused. I had the privilege of riding with Mr. Ford in one of what he calls "the experimental cars" that have been already turned out by hand.

WALL STREET'S persistent rumors that General Motors is preparing to acquire Chrysler are flatly rejected by Detroit. It is pointed out that General Motors already has "a car for every purse," and that, therefore, there is no necessity for its paying many millions of dollars for the Chrysler Company. Nor, in view of the phenomenal success attained by Chrysler, is it regarded as in the slightest degree likely that Walter P. Chrysler would be willing to sell out, no matter how tempting an offer might be made.

In short the automobile industry calls these Wall Street rumors "sheer bunk."

THE Fishers of Fisher body and automobile fame have become one of the wealthiest families in America. The six brothers, sons of an industrious father and an exemplary mother, early developed brilliant talents and have applied themselves energetically to doing big things successfully. Since control of Fisher body went to General Motors, the Fishers have become very active and influential in the latter corporation.

The foundation is today being dug for what is described as the largest office building in the world, the Fisher Building on Grand and Second boulevards, Detroit, just across the street from the General Motors Building, and entirely covering one large block.

Detroit, I am told, is at present actively engaged on a $100,000,000 building program. The city continues to grow by leaps and bounds.

I was impressed by the number of tourists everywhere in evidence. Detroit is becoming a popular convention city. Many visitors now avail themselves of the opportunity to fly over the city in a regularly-conducted service—the charge is only $5 for half-an-hour's flight. No accident has ever occurred. Many also visit motor plants and the General Motors unique proving ground. Detroit also has several other industries of unusual interest and magnitude.

COMMENTING on what has been said recently in this column regarding conditions in Europe, Henry Ewald, head of the Campbell-Ewald Company, who place many millions of dollars' worth of advertising every year, declared that Europe is no further advanced in advertising than America was twenty-five years ago. Consequently large-scale production is not practiced as here. Nor is distribution as efficient.

Advertising a product, Mr. Ewald philosophizes, has a tonic effect upon an organization, including its ordinary workers. "They feel that they must live up to their advertising," he observed.

Something in this, isn't there?

STOCKS SHOW OUTBURST OF STRENGTH

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(AP.)—The stock market opened today with an outburst of strength. The bulk of the buying again centered in the high-priced industrials. International Harvester (cash) ran up 2½ points, Brooklyn Union Gas 2 and Peoples Gas, Houston Oil, American Smelting and United States Rubber showed gains of a point or more.

The market continued to sweep forward on heavy buying orders poured into the motor, rubber, public utility and mercantile issues. General Motors (new) opened with a block of 12,000 shares at the "special" price of 127 to 127½, and then crossed 130 to a new peak. The old stock touched 275½. Traders put a bullish interpretation on the Washington dispatches that President Coolidge believed substantial tax reduction possible despite the increased needs of the Army and Navy.

The rapidity of the advance led to rather extensive realizing by cautious gentlemen, but offerings were well absorbed. New peak prices were established in the first hour of trading for Chrysler & Arizona Consolidated Gas, Import Capital Hous, Goodyear, Peoples Gas and Texas Gulf Sulphur.

There were only a few soft spots, commercial solvents, which recorded a sensational advance yesterday, falling back 6 points.

Foreign exchanges opened firm with sterling at the year's high of $4.86¼ for cables.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The cotton market opened firm today at an advance of 10 to 14 points on buying stimulated by reactively from Liverpool cables, but met considerable selling, which was attributed partly to realizing by buyers on the decline of yesterday and selling by the Bears.

This caused reactions after the call, December selling down from 21.51c to 21.42c, or within 10 points of yesterday's closing quotations, but buying continued, the market showing net advances of 19 to 27 points at the end of the first hour.

Private cables told the advance in Liverpool had been due to covering by certain sellers and buying in India and the continent, together, with trade buying and calling.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 19,555 bales, against 15,715 bales last year.

PRICE CHANGES IRREGULAR ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

Week-End Session Quiet Here

No important changes were noted in the price list on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange in today's abbreviated session. Opening was a little more active than on Friday, but after a few overnight order accumulations were wiped off the books the market settled back to routine quietness.

Traders were inclined to look for a demonstration of some sort in Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt in view of its sudden upturn on the curb yesterday, but the stock came into the market slightly lower and failed to display more than ordinary activity. Early sales today were recorded at 56½ as against last night's run-up to 58, the peak of the current upswing.

Miscellaneous issues were handled at practically unchanged prices. A few lots of Standard Sanitary Manufacturing changed hands at 98, the price at which it closed Friday, while the new Westinghouse Air-brake appeared on the board at 83½. Lone Star Gas was dull and unchanged at 48½.

DEATH ROLL

William Zoller.

William Zoller, 77, president of the William Zoller Company, meat packing firm of the North Side, died Friday night in his summer home in Swansburg, Pa., after a brief illness. Death was due to infirmities of age.

Besides being president of the meat packing company, he was chairman of the board of directors. Mr. Zoller was born May 23, 1850, in the Spring Garden avenue district. He became manager of a small slaughter house in that vicinity at the age of 19, when his father died. The business prospered under his management and in 1903 it was incorporated.

Dr. B. J. Henney

Dr. B. J. Henney, 69, Carnegie physician, died Friday in his home, 45 Broadway extension. Dr. Henney was a life-long resident of Carnegie. He was a member of the Allegheny County Medical Association. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Alice Nelson Henney; two sons, Raymond and Leo Henney; two daughters, Miss Margaret and Miss Mary Henney.

Mrs. Ellen F. Fulton

Mrs. Ellen Frazee Fulton, 89, widow of Prof. George F. Fulton, after whom Fulton school, East Liberty, was named, died Friday in the home of her daughter, Mrs. William L. McEwan, 906 South Negley avenue. She leaves two sons, Attorney W. E. Fulton and Robert A. Fulton and a daughter, Mrs. McEwan.

Mrs. Rebecca J. Pouks.

Mrs. Rebecca Jane Pouks, widow of Daniel Pouks, died Thursday in her home, 2351 Bensonia avenue, Beechview. She leaves five daughters, Mrs. Frank E. Scheller, Mrs. James B. Anderson, Mrs. Jess H. Carver, Mrs. Lillian H. Allen and Miss Alice M. Pouks and one son, Lloyd E. Pouks.

Rev. Dr. George H. Edwards

The Rev. Dr. George H. Edwards, former archdeacon of the Episcopal diocese of Southern Ohio, died Friday night. He was the father of the Rev. H. Boyd Edwards, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Assumption, here.

PERRY HIGH ORGANIZES RED CROSS CLASSES

Classes in home hygiene and care of the sick will be organized at the Perry High School Monday evening at 7:30. The classes, held under the direction of the Pittsburgh Chapter, American Red Cross, will be taught by a Red Cross nurse. The classes are open to women living in the district near the high school and they may register at the school on Monday evening.

Clothing Friend Wife Hooks Hubby 2 Ways

By EDWARD M. BUTTENBER,
Universal Service Fashion Expert.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—In a recent exclusive interview with Universal Service an executive representing one of the nationally-known wholesale clothing houses caromed off the style issue with the announcement that "America is a race of overdressed women and underdressed men." And the more women pay for their clothes the less they seem to get, in the opinion of this expert observer.

Whenever the length of a dress changes an inch or two the women feel that it is necessary for them to make new purchases and by so doing they absorb the family appropriation for apparel. The American men react to the strain of maintaining the best-dressed women in the world by demanding cheaper clothing for themselves, it is asserted by the clothing authority quoted.

"I found all over the country on a recent tour that the tendency in the clothing business is to trade down, while in the women's wear field the demand is for expensive frocks, silk lingerie and chiffon stockings," remarked the observer. "As the apparel for women stresses exposure and scantiness the price goes up, which is a striking contrast with styles for men.

CHAIN STORES.

"The manufacturers are fighting to sell clothing on a volume basis, give an excellent value and by so doing keep masculine interest in clothes alive. There are a great many $35 suits being sold in the country today, and in my opinion there are even more $22.50 outfits on the market. Chain stores are opening from ocean to ocean and from the Great Lakes to Mexico and practically all of these stores are being conducted on a basis of small profits and huge volume.

"Manufacturers of clothing are getting into the business themselves as fast as they can and by forming chains of retail outlet they are enabled to deal directly with the consumer. The men are sold on the style idea but the old family council decrees that father submit to the attentions of a clothier who can supply a lot for a little.

"I found the greatest evidences of style consciousness among the men in the oil regions, where clothiers are dealing largely with the suddenly prosperous. The $5 silk shirt is making a last stand where the gushers and derricks constitute the background. In such spots as the men are in a position to do so they are spending plenty of money for clothes, but the salaried city man seldom has a chance to strike it rich. His wife knows how much money he makes and she uses diplomacy, vision, rhetoric, or both, to divert such grandeur to her own purposes. The man who tries to argue about clothes with his wife is beaten before he starts, but he is getting a bigger dollar's worth on his own apparel by a wide margin.

"The men's clothing market stresses style at a popular price in the centers where business runs to volume. The tendency in the women's markets on the other hand it to cut down on the material and run up the price. All of which accounts for many things that are a mystery to the uninitiated."

France Seeks World Peace In Arbitration

By Universal Service.

GENEVA, Sept. 17.—Voicing France's desire for a world arbitration agreement to assure the peaceful settlement of all international disputes, Paul Boncour, of the French delegation, today offered a resolution ordering the preparatory commission to begin a study of the question of national security. Under the resolution the subject of security would be considered along with the question of disarmament.

Boncour recommended the adoption of arbitration as a means of creating mutual confidence which "is indispensable to world peace." He made a long plea in support of disarmament.

The resolution was taken under advisement.

"If France has continued to speak insistently on the matter of security," said M. Boncour, "it has not been for her security alone, which is partially assured by the Locarno pact, but because she realized that many countries would bring up the question and make reservations regarding disarmament until the final result would be to make war easier, rather than to suppress it."

Father and Son, Vets, Salute Unknown

By WILLIAM HILLMAN,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent, Special Cable Dispatch.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—Two generals, father and son, one who marched with the victorious German troops through Paris in 1871 and the other with the victorious A. E. F. in 1918, stood with bared heads in silence beneath the Arch of Triumph as Gen. Pershing saluted the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

"I fought to destroy an empire. [illegible] French and established a republic. The German retired and left his son. You fought to destroy an empire. The German and established a republic. Father!"

DEPUTIES BEGIN COLLECTION OF BALLOTS

United States deputy marshals started out at noon today on the huge task of impounding ballot boxes used in the general election last November in 54 counties of Western Pennsylvania, exclusive of Allegheny county.

Only six men are available for the work, and they were instructed by United States Marshal J. C. McGregor to proceed first to Beaver, Crawford, Fayette, Lawrence, Somerset, Venango and Washington counties, in each of which, it is said, there is only one set of ballot boxes.

It is estimated that there are approximately 1,800 districts in which the boxes must be impounded, as a result of the granting of a petition yesterday in Federal court presented in behalf of William S. Vare, Republican Senator-elect, and William H. Wilson, defeated Democratic candidate.

Wedding Date Hinges on Fight

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Sept. 17.—(INS.)—If Dempsey defeats Tunney, Miss Grace Holden, 21, will be a June bride next year. But if Tunney wins, Miss Holden's marriage to Henry Piper will be performed next January. Miss Holden wants to be married in June, but Piper sees no reason for such a wait. The result of the fight will decide the date.

CHILLY SAUCE
By Chilly Doyle

TWO of the greatest and most difficult catches of the season were flashed by Pie Traynor and Lloyd Waner on successive plays this week. Traynor's diving catch of Eddie Brown's fungo liner, which resulted in a double play, saved the Wednesday battle, while our little centerfielder rose to his best fielding skill to nail Richbourg's liner to left center yesterday. This capture also appears to have prevented a snap in the unbroken string of successes.

ONLY a few days ago I heard [illegible] say he would like to see a man to the outfield that would have the jack Robert has for the greatest of fun. This accusation did not have to wait many days after making the "crack" for words and words. Lloyd has been making field catches comparable only owing to his speed and individuality. But when Richbourg appeared his Waneriness the youngster had to let go of everything and settle for second.

WHOM the gods look it appeared [illegible] As the sphere whether [illegible] seemed to be it would a foul out of its eager reach. But the tiny star was a spring like a jack-knife and he was bend in all manners and shapes in a hurry. Sprout had to get his hands close to the grasshopper as he doubled over. There was a smack as the ball hits his grasp. His cleverness after was all that prevented a header as the impact was terrific and he was decidedly off balance. Lloyd had to run with his head close to the ground for 20 feet or more before he could upright himself. It was a marvelous bit of fielding, the amount of ground covered being a big feature of the capture.

IT WAS a field day for the lad all around. He made three clean hits and was close to five. Only the smartness and skill of the wonderful Bancroft kept Sprout from a perfect day at the plate. In the [illegible] Banny appeared to move about for first toward second just before the center fielder hit a sizzling smash right into the glove of the Brave's pilot. Later Banny hustled to his left and pulled down a hard, high bounder just in time to check Sproul at first.

HARRIS also connected for three hits and in a general way dominated the play of the Pirates. Coulter Joe is one of the greatest team workers the Pirates have had for many seasons. Joe would not mind going hitless for a month if the Pirates could win consistently.

JIMMY WELSH, center fielder, left an impression on Pirate fans that will cause a lot of comment when star outfielders are being mentioned. Welsh and the Waner boys are playing the best ball of any flychasers in the circuit. Banny's star is sure-fire on all kinds of drives, whether they be in the air or on the ground. His arm is a delight and he can skim over the ground at a fast clip.

ALLEGHENY'S WORKOUTS DISPLEASE GRID COACH

MEADVILLE, Pa., Sept. 17.—The work of the Allegheny College grid candidates failed to meet up with the approval of Coach Mel Merritt yesterday and as a result the usual afternoon scrimmage was interrupted summarily and the varsity team was put through a rigorous period of signal drill.

Time after time plays that did not go in accordance to the mentor's idea were repeated. Coach Merritt was plainly dissatisfied with the manner in which the first string men were performing, and he made frequent changes in the lineup. McKay replacing Hughes at end, Cuber replacing Brady at guard and alternating several men in the backfield.

Coach Merritt is considerably worried over his line, particularly the tackles. Regardless of what combination he finally chooses it will [illegible] unusual appearance of a with an average weight in that of the line. The shows an average of but with a backfield of close to 180, neals one of the tackles looked upon as a regular, weighs but 167 pounds.

Renew Play For Titles

By TOM BERKS.

WITH four championship battles carded on the local sandlots this afternoon, followers of the local semi-pro and amateur outfits will not have any dearth of well played battles for their afternoon's entertainment.

Out at McKinley Park in the South Hills, Beltzhoover and Bellevue will lock horns in the second game of the Allegheny County League post-season championship. Should Bellevue win it means the end of the series, as the North Borough nine aided and abetted by some wonderful twirling on the part of Art Shaw defeated the Hawks by a 3 to 0 score. So it is very evident that Manager Hite of Bethlehem will take to throwing all his pride in the fire to make the setters go the limit.

Then at Schenley High School field the post-season championship of Kaufmann's Major League will flash its first game when Jack Collette's St. Richards Club, winner of the first half, meets Bill McGrady's St. Johns nine from Lawrenceville, winner of the second half championship. This series is going to be hot.

Then over at the Salt Works Park North Side, Chris McCormick's Regina Candies will battle with the Heinz nine for the post-season championship of the City League, and this also should flash some real action. This will be the first game of the series.

Out at Lawrenceville the post-season championship of Kaufmann's Amateur League will be flashed when Washington Alumni meet the Whittaker A. A. in the first of a three games series.

These four battles should provide plenty of sport for sandlotters and all of the games should be staged with a capacity attendance.

KECK FINDS DEMPSEY READY FOR BOUT

By HARRY KECK,
Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

LINCOLN FIELDS, Crete, Ill., Sept. 17.—Jack Dempsey already is on edge for his return bout with Champion Gene Tunney at Soldier Field, Chicago, next Thursday night. He exhibited all the symptoms in his workout under the arc lights in his training camp here last night before a crowd of close to 1,000, including [illegible] spectators who were welcome and gate-crashers who were [illegible]

Dempsey demonstrated his readiness for combat by the snappy manner in which he went through his paces, and Manager Leo P. Flynn verified the suspicion by telling the scribes how peevish Jack is these days. There's almost no living with the big fellow, according to Leo, and they do say that a sour disposition goes with the fighting "punk." Yesterday was a cool day in Chicago and environs following a heavy rain that washed away the heat that had fried the section for several days before. It got cooler as the evening wore on, and Dempsey hastened to get his evening's workout under way and over with. He was due to perform at 9 o'clock, but was in the ring at 8:25, so that some of the newspapermen didn't arrive on time to see him. The former champion started off by shadow boxing and then took on Roy Williams for a round. He cut loose during the first minute and socked Williams with everything, but could not floor the young sparring partner, who came along well toward the finish, countering with some nifty right uppercuts.

AVOIDS PUNISHMENT

During this session with Williams, Dempsey took good care to avoid as possible, giving theimpression that much punishment as possible, giving the impression that he is going to try to block more blows than he did the last time he met Tunney. He kept his shoulders high and his chin buried behind them and moved in with both arms outstretched, in groping fashion, knocking down leads and then grabbing his partner. The idea of this seems to be that he hopes to work his way close to Tunney, as he did against Sharkey, and concentrate on attack to the body, meanwhile taking as little socking as possible.

The second round was worked against Allentown Joe Gans, Manager Flynn's Negro middleweight. This was mainly for speed and there was no hard punching. Dempsey tried out his weaving and bobbing against Gans and once weaved himself partly outside the ropes. Not so good. A third round saw Davy Shade, one of Manager Flynn's other 160 or 170 middleweights, pitted against the erstwhile Manassa Mauler, and it appeared as if they were playing hide and seek. Speed, mostly Shade's, dominated this frame and Dempsey simply couldn't locate the bobbing belter who kept tantalizing him and breaking ground.

TRICK IN TRAINING

Came then an unusual trick in a Dempsey camp, just following up his boxing with a session on the small punching bag. Heretogore, Dempsey always has worked on the light bag first, as it's a tiresome job after getting through boxing. Sharkey punched the bag after his workout while training for Dempsey, but Dempsey appeared to lack the pep to do so. Perhaps the invigorating evening air may have had something to do with the change in his program last night. At any rate, it is encouraging news to Dempsey's friends that he is now punching the bag after and not before boxing and making a good job of it.

Leo Flynn also punched the bag a bit after the boxing session, but it was bag-punching of a different sort. Leo does all of his bag-punching with his jaws. He was in good form last night. He asked a rather pertinent question of the assembled scribes. Since when, he wanted to know, has Tunney become such a great fighter that he figures to be tough to beat? "He wasn't considered even a good fighter before he beat Dempsey," Flynn said, answering his own question, "and he couldn't stop a sick Dempsey that night. And he hasn't fought since. Say, where does he bury his dead?" Joe Benjamin, former coast lightweight, and a pal of Dempsey, said he considered Jack a sure shot to win "just simply can't lose," is the way Benjamin put it.

ANOTHER TONIGHT

Dempsey will work out again tonight and Sunday night at his camp and that will finish up his hard work for the fight. The remainder of the program will be of a tapering off nature. He weighed 197 pounds last night and expects to scale around 193 for the fight. He said he felt fine boxing at night and was certain he would be at home when he enters the ring against Tunney under virtually similar lighting conditions.

The scribes who have been here for some time were complaining to Manager Flynn because of the difficulty in getting in to have a word or two with Dempsey in person.

Flynn has been getting the blame for keeping them out, in fact he has been taking the rap for everything that has been happening around the camp to displease anybody. However, he defended himself in this instance. He said Dempsey actually is peevish these days and doesn't want to see anybody. Jack was all worked up after granting an interview to some of the boys the other day, Leo said. "I've been around fighters for a long time," Flynn added, "and I never before knew one of them could be so touchy and become so upset over little things. Jack isn't worrying about the fight. I guess he's just r'arin' to go, that's all." If it isn't worry, it must be what Leo says it is. For it must be one or the other—perhaps both.

GRAYS MEET JOHNSTOWN

This afternoon at Johnstown the Homestead Grays will open a two-game series with the Johnstown club, second half season champions of the Middle Atlantic League. Today's game is to be played at the Point grounds and the second on Sunday afternoon is listed for Ideal Park, near Johnstown.

Oscar Owens will be Manager Posey's selection for mound duty today with the 51 year old star, Smoky Joe Williams slated to perform on Sunday. Chief Bender, the Johnstown manager will hurl one of the games for his club, probably the Sunday affair with Joe Hartman, against Owens today.

MRS. ROSE COPS WEST PENN CROWN

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

Mrs. J. Bernd Rose, of the Allegheny County Club, successfully defended her title when she defeated Miss Anjeanette Hunter, of the Stanton Heights Golf Club, 6 and 4, in the final round to cop her second consecutive Western Pennsylvania women's championship, staged under the auspices of the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania, over the links of the Fox Chapel Golf Club, yesterday. Both played fine golf through to the final, and in the titular round the champion had little trouble winning when Miss Hunter's putting went back on her.

In the other divisions, Mrs. E. W. Salisbury won in the second, Mrs. F. M. Sloan in the third, Mrs. Langfitt in the fourth, Mrs. John Casey, Jr., in the fifth, Mrs. R. K. MacConnell in the sixth, Mrs. Reed in the seventh and Miss Boschert in the eighth.

Miss Grace Fagan captured the honor in the first division consolation flight. Miss Honora Wood won in the second, Miss Anna Wood in the third, Mrs. Norman in the fourth, Mrs. Irwin in the fifth, Mrs. Gidney in the sixth, Mrs. Hunter in the seventh and Mrs. Hooper in the eighth.

Denny St. Clair and Mrs. William Simpson and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Fields deadlocked for the honors in one of the largest mixed foursome competitions this year, in which 112 players participated, which was held in conjunction with the championship. The first-named pair scored 91-14-77 and the second 98-17-77.

MISS GOULD CHAMPION

Miss Jesse Gould triumphed in the women's Schenley Park Golf Club championship tournament yesterday when she defeated Mrs. George E. Curry, 3 and 1, in the final round, played over the municipal links. While neither player was up to snuff in medal playing, it was a close contest throughout. Their cards:

JACK SHARKEY IN ROW

By HERBERT WESTEN.
(Universal Service Staff Correspondent.)

LAKE VILLA, Ill., Sept. 17.—Jack Sharkey, who might have been a contender for the world's heavyweight title, narrowlp escaped coming to blows with Chuck Wiggins, Gene Tunney's star sparring partner, here yesterday afternoon following the workout.

Wiggins spent two hours "gunning" for the man who lost to Dempsey last July in Madison Square Garden and threatened, if he found him, to toss him unconscious into the club swimming pool.

The Boston Lithuanian, however, had departed hurriedly in a limousine some minutes after the workout. Remarks Sharkey is alleged to have made while Wiggins was in the ring boxing Tunney are declared to have been responsible for the outbreak of an old feud.

One statement credited to Sharkey was the charge that Wiggins was "trying to show up the champion."

Sharkey's alleged remarks were delivered from the press section. The Boston heavyweight who, had not lost to Dempsey in the elimination tournament, would have been the man picked by Tex Rickard to fight Tunney in Chicago September 22, was here representing a newspaper. Wiggins followed Jackie Williams, Chicago heavyweight in the ring against Tunney. Through the workout Sharkey was free with his remarks about Wiggins' style and his "clowning antics."

Wiggins' fiancee was seated directly in front of the speaker.

She relayed Sharkey's remarks to her boy friend before he doffed his ring togs. While Wiggins dressed Sharkey disappeared. Wiggins was hot and vindictive and insisted upon searching the entire camp for the man who, he charged, referred to him as "just trying to clown it through and show up the champion," and a man who "couldn't lick Tom Thumb."

It was not long ago, according to Wiggins, that Sharkey demanded a fight with him. Wiggins' refusal to fight according to Sharkey's ethical terms, caused the cancellation of the contest and brought on a feud which, this afternoon was dragged directly to the attention of the champion.

ALLEGHENY COLLEGE LOSES FLOOR LEADER

MEADVILLE, Pa., Sept. 17.—Only one letterman will be available for the Allegheny College basketball team this season, according to deductions from the announcement of a faculty ruling today that Joe Thompson, of Titusville, will not be permitted to resume his studies. Thompson was to have captained the team during the coming season and he is added now to the list of absent lettermen, Cibula, Rhodes and Wescott, guards, and McClurg, forward, all of whom graduated in June.

Al Moon, center, will be the only letterman remaining for the team that won the tri-state championship last season.

Thompson, it is understood, was given an opportunity to better his scholastic standing by attending summer school sessions, but his marks at that time were insufficient to tide him over the factuity requirements.

TAD'S TIDBITS

RIGHT NOW the big question is "WHERE ARE YOU SQUATTING?" Of course, everybody who is ANYBODY has a seat for the big quarrel, but unless you step up to the box office with black glasses or blinkers you can't buy a seat. No one is allowed a peek at the line of march and all seats are bought without knowledge of their exact location.

Rickard's rubber ringside has the boys winging.

Of course, those "ringside seats" are old stuff to New Yorkers, but out in Chicago the boys "ain't seen nothin' yet."

We've had the three R's here for years. We've tried to SEE from those Rickard rubber ringside seats, and it CAN'T BE DONE WITHOUT A MAKEUP, as we say at the club.

Rickard's rubber ringside seats remind us of near beer. THEY AIN'T!

We hear that Tex has hired a flock of Hopi Indian Marathon runners as ushers for the rubber ringsiders. Why not a bunch of old pony express riders and a squad of motorcycles? There's the layout!

Anyway, Chicago, you can have it!

Now You Tell One.

HERB PENNOCK, the Yankee pitcher, got into an argument with Umpire Clarence Rowland during a hot game at the Yankee Stadium. Pennock carried the tilt to the point of a heated wrangle and the arbiter pulled his watch for the customary bluff.

An elderly Jewish man who accompanied a couple of younger men, was prepared for almost any kind of an outbreak as the result of the controversy. But he was disillusioned when he saw the watch come out.

"Did you see that?" he asked one of his young companions. "After all that trouble he asks d' empire what time it is."

JOHN B. SHERIDAN.

Dempsey as a Defender.

OLD "Scoop" Gleeson of 'Frisco steps out with another letter. We print part of his latest below. It says:

"So Walter Kelly, the Virginia Judge, has been telling Gene Tunney that Dempsey can't hit. I have just read your story about it.

"Where Are You Squatting?" Big Question in Chi

"We were both at the ringside in Toledo when Dempsey toppled the giant Willard over on the canvas seven times in three minutes. The performance left us breathless. It was by all odds the most dramatic overthrow of a champion either of us had witnessed. Baggerly always has said he considered Willard the poorest excuse for a champion we ever had, but no matter. It was no inconsiderable feat for Dempsey, weighing 183 pounds, to batter down Willard, weighing 237, and standing well over 6 feet 6.

"But the Judge says Jeffries was a greater hitter. For comparison's sake, you might cite Jeffries' two battles with Bob Fitzsimmons, middleweight and light-heavyweight. Do they stack up alongside Dempsey's win over Willard? What about Jeffries' two battles with Tom Sharkey? Why didn't he knock Sharkey down? Surely he had height, reach and a tremendous advantage in weight.

"The Virginia Judge may well consider Jeffries a greater hitter in spite of this. He beat Fitzsimmons twice; he beat Corbett twice. Both were well along when he did it. Both gave him the devil as long as they were in there. Corbett almost licked him. Fitz beat him up worse than anyone he ever faced. Jeff licked Peter Jackson, but that was in the tragic days of Jackson's than Dempsey, but I would remind you of something—Jeffries was a bigger and stronger man than Dempsey, and his record is not too imposing career. Now, I ask you, who else did Jeffries fight who was any better than the men Dempsey licked?

If you analyze the thing you MUST know Dempsey was a great hitter. I don't care how many times he had to knock Willard and Firpo down to keep them there. The point is he DID knock them down and he did it within six or seven minutes of the time he entered the ring.

"You quote Kelly as saying Dempsey didn't knock Willard out, that he knocked him down, but the taps didn't keep him down as one of Jeffries' used to. What does he mean, the punch Jeffries used on Jack Munroe, or the one he used on Jack Johnson?"

TUNNEY SUFFERS EYE INJURY AGAIN

By GENE FOWLER,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

LAKE VILLA, Ill., Sept. 17.—Gene Tunney's well-wishers were thrown into a near panic yesterday afternoon when the heavyweight champion's right eye was scruffed by a sparring partner. With the 10-round Dempsey battle only six nights in the offing, Chicago betters scurried 'round and about the town, inquiring anxiously as to the injury.

The facts, drawn from a maze of claims and counter claims, seem to be as follows:

In the first round of his opening practice bout with Jackie Williams, Chicago light-heavyweight, the thumb of Jackie's left mitten gouged into the expensive right eye of the champion. This was the same eye that was bruised 10 days ago by another sparring mate, Chuck Wiggins, the rough heavyweight. Chuck butted Gene while rising from a crouch in the infighting. Blood streamed and Gene's brow was put in the fistic repair shop for three days.

The new injury, which is belittled by Gene and by Billy Gibson, was to the eyeball itself. Regardless of the fact that his vision was blurred, Gene worked out for five more rounds against Williams, Wiggins and Billy Vidabeck. Regardless of Gib's statements last night, it seemed as though he were about to suffer a heart attack when the champion's gouged eye showed signs of closing.

A close inspection of the champion's eye later disclosed that there was no abrasion through which dirt could enter and cause any infection. Lou Fink, Tunney's trainer, however, commanded hourly eye washes and absolute rest. The champion was allowed to do no reading or remain under electric light. As as a result he retired to his quarters immediately after dinner and remained in a bedimmed room listening to his phonograph until bedtime.

"The next 12 hours will decide whether any serious consequences will attend the injury," Fink said. "I don't believe there is any need to worry. A man in Gene's physical condition can throw off any inflammation or poisoning that might affect the eye."

GENE VERY TIDY, MAID SAYS

By FAYETTE KRUMM MULROY,
Woman's Sports Editor of the Chicago Herald and Examiner and Universal Service.

LAKE VILLA, Ill., Sept. 17.—The Marquis of Douglas and Clydesdale, son of the Duke and Duchess of Hamilton, premier peer of Scotland, will arrive in Chicago Monday to be the guest of Tunney at the fight. The marquis is an amateur boxer himself and was with Eddie Eagan on a trip around the world last year, during which they gave frequent boxing exhibitions for charity. He was a classmate of Eagan's at Oxford.

You can take it from Margy, colored maid, who cleans Gene's room every day, that the world champion is that ideal of every married woman, a tidy man about the house.

"I've worked for many fine bosses," says Margy, "but there never was one like Mister Tunney. He even takes the bedspread off his own bed every night and folds it nice across a chair. The newspaper boys just leave theirs right on the bed when they goes to sleep."

Margy says she finds his pajamas hung up every morning and that he never leaves any of his clothes around. He inquires about her health every morning and wrote a fine "reference" for her. This note, addressed to whom it might concern, stated that Margy's work as a laundress was very satisfactory and was signed with Gene's large and bold signature and those of Billy Gibson, his manager; Bill McCabe, his friend, and Jimmy Mahoney, his secretary.

"I'm going to bet all my tips on Mister Tunney. He's sure goin' to win. So there you are—Margy's may be wise money; she may get more than one kind of tip.

WILLIE DAVIES LOSES BOUT

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 17.—(AP.)—Johnny McCoy of Cleveland won his second start in California's elimination tournament to pick a successor for Fidel La Barba's relinquished flyweight title, when he defeated Willie Davies, Charleroi, Pa., in a 10-round bout here last night.

McCoy defeated Brett Gorman of Minneapolis in the first elimination bout.

TIGERS BUY CATCHER

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 17.—(AP.)—Eddie Phillips, a catcher of the Nashville team of the Southern Association, announced at his home here today that he had been bought by the Detroit Tigers for $25,000. Three players figure in the deal, he said. Phillips was owned by the Yankees, but was sold to Nashville. In about 70 games he batted for .394.

SPORTSMEN'S MEET TODAY

The annual Field Day of the Allegheny County Sportsmen's League will be held today just outside of Carrick. Leading sportsmen from all sections of the county are expected to compete in the various events on the attractive program.

Besides shotgun and rifle events, there will be match team shoots between Wilkinsburg, Homestead, Tarentum, South Hills, Elizabeth and other clubs operating in this vicinity.

There is a fine list of revolver events on the program and indications point to a large entry list in this competition.

The outing will be held on the grounds of the South Hills Sportsmen's Club, near Carrick. Direction signs have been placed along the leading roads to Carrick. On the Brownsville road at Murray avenue, Carrick, a large sign is placed across the road; at this point turn down Murray avenue. A free bus is stationed at this point to convey street car passengers to grounds.

Starting at Pittsburgh and Lake Erie depot at Pittsburgh, go east on Carson street—straight through the South Side—to Becks Run road; turn right on Becks Run road and follow signs. Sportsmen from Wilkinsburg, Braddock, McKeesport and Duquesne should follow boulevard along Monongahela River—through Homestead—to Becks Run. These directions are intended for automobiles.

Bill Johnston Through With Cup Tennis

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(AP.)—Little Bill Johnston, an outstanding figure in American tennis for the last decade, has played his last Davis Cup match. The fiery little Californian, beaten in the international series last week by both Henri Cochet and Rene LaCoste of the French team, and eliminated in the semi-finals of the national championships yesterday by LaCoste, announced his retirement last night at a dinner given aboard the liner France by the victorious French team.

Dwight F. Davis, donor of the Davis Cup, told the players he had been hoping for three years that the French would take the trophy home.

"Now we can go ahead and develop new players," he said. "Tennis is a young man's game, and we have been depending too long on our veterans. I believe it will prove a good thing for the game to have our monopoly broken."

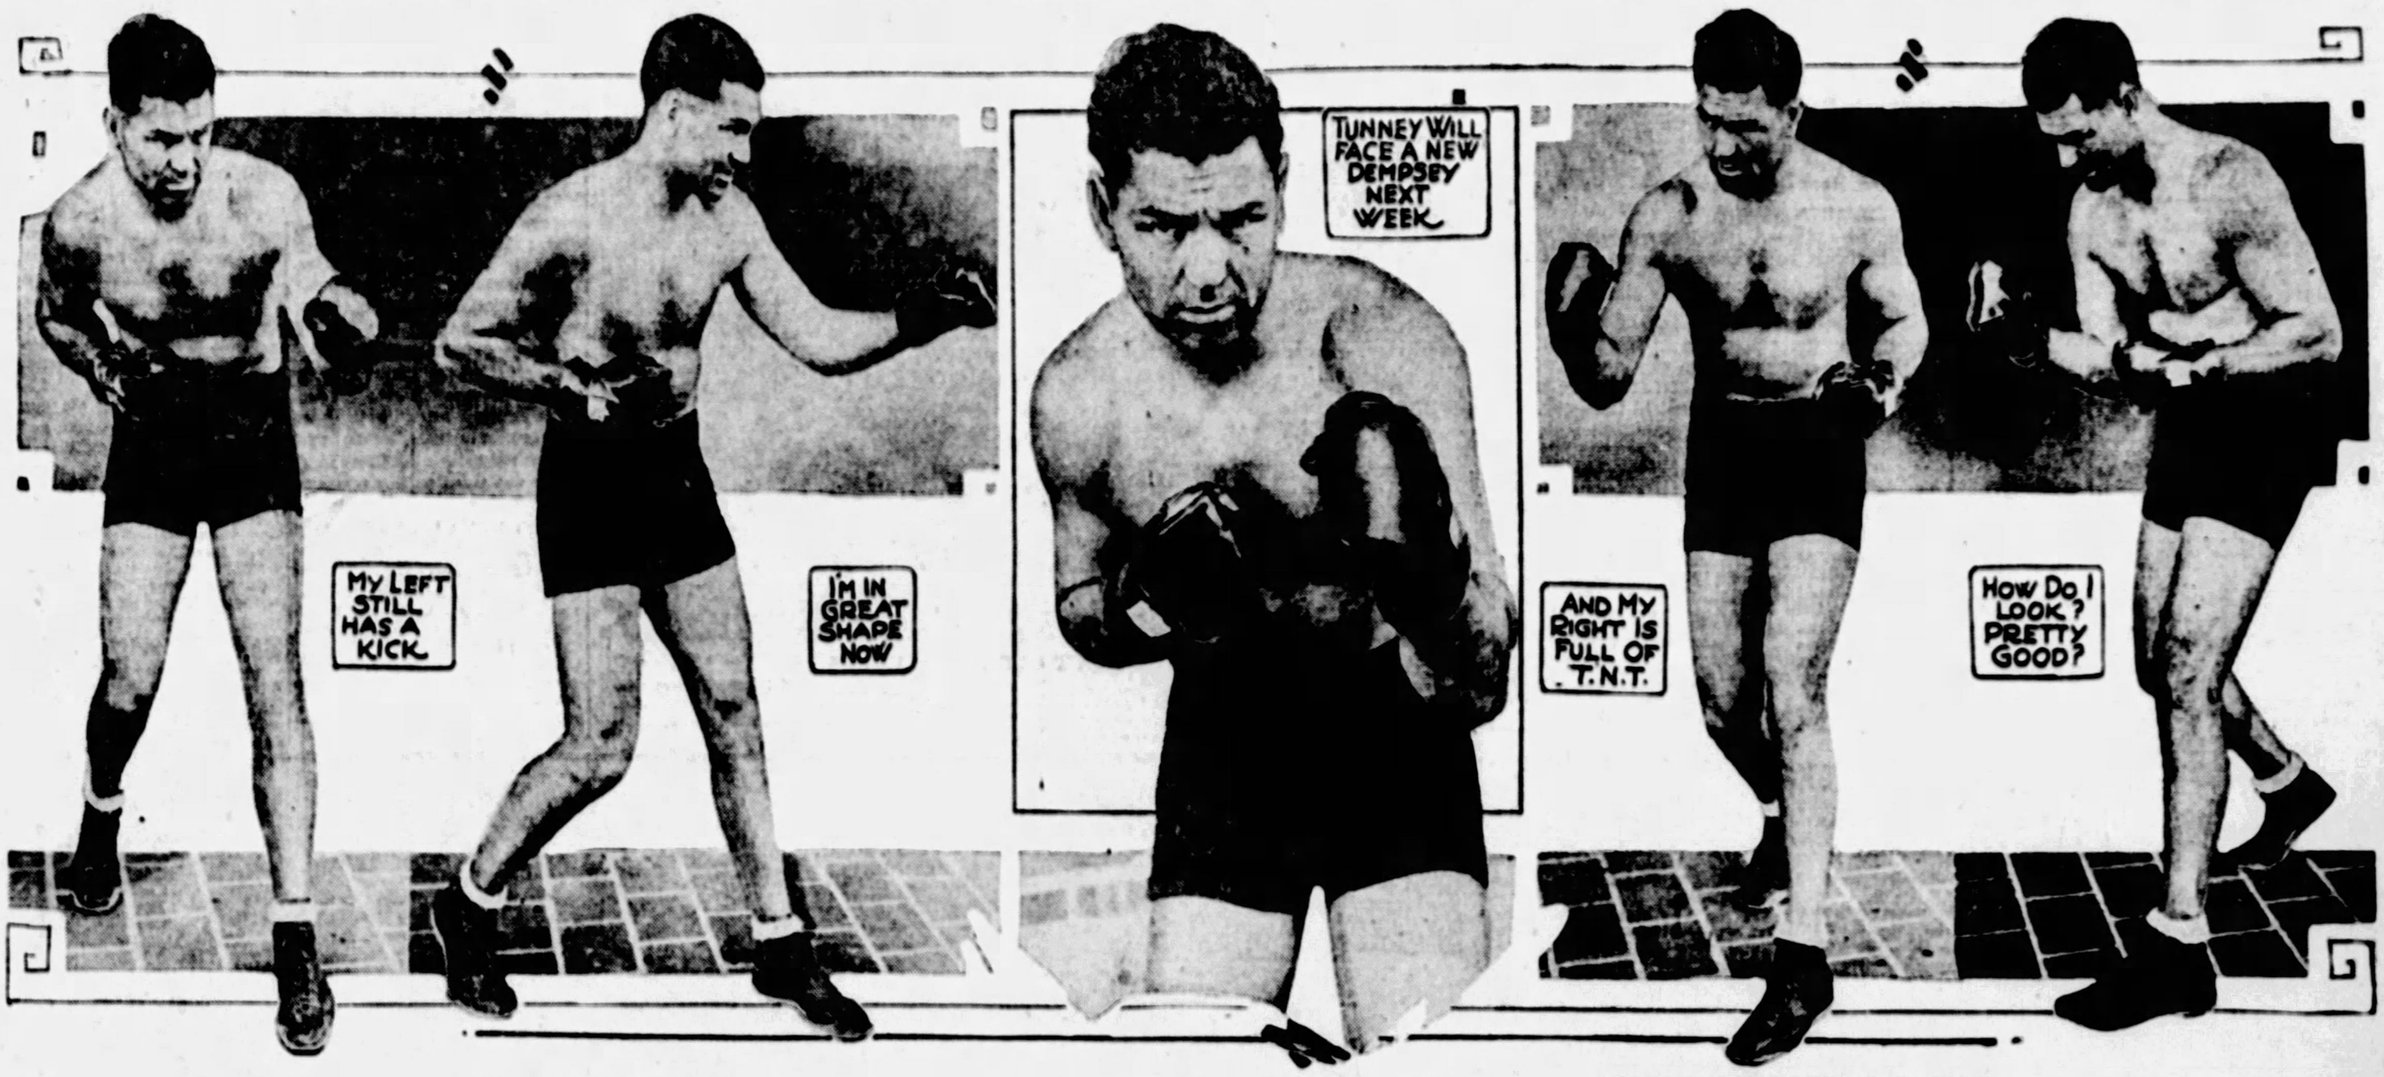
OPEN POLO TOURNEY GETS UNDER WAY TODAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(INS.)—Play in the open polo championship tournament begins today with a match at Meadow Brook between the Eastcott Four and the British Army in India team. Two members of the British international quartet, which lost to America, will play with the latter aggregation.

PURDY WILL REFEREE FIGHT--KECK

BUCS OUT TO ADD TO LEAD IN TWO GAMES WITH ROBINS

JACK DEMPSEY AS HE -:- APPEARS TRAINING FOR HIS -:- BID TO REGAIN TITLE



MY LEFT STILL HAS A KICK
I'M IN GREAT SHAPE NOW
TUNNEY WILL FACE A NEW DEMPSEY NEXT WEEK
AND MY RIGHT IS FULL OF T.N.T.
HOW DO I LOOK? PRETTY GOOD?

WHY I THINK I'LL WIN

Jack says old "Iron Mike," his great left hook to the body and head, is just as powerful as ever and that no man can long withstand it, especially now that he feels he is in wonderful physical condition again. He certainly looks rugged and tough enough in the above pictures. Critics say he is in far better shape than he was for his first fight with Tunney.

IT'LL BE DIFFERENT THIS TIME

That's both a promise and a threat to Gene Tunney, whom Dempsey meets at Chicago next Thursday night in his effort to regain the heavyweight championship which he lost to Gene at Philadelphia just a year ago. The right is a good finisher after the left paves the way, according to Jack, who is anxious to avenge that Sesqui showing.

CHAMPION PROTECTED IN CASE OF FOUL

By HARRY KECK,
Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Jack Dempsey may have the judges and fans with him, but Gene Tunney will have a referee of his own selection in the ring with him when he defends his world's heavyweight championship against the party of the first part mentioned above in the Soldier Field arena here next Thursday night.

Many thousands of words have been put through the mills—slang for typewriters—on the referee subject by the scribes here for the fight during the last two or three days, and numerous personages have been mentioned for the berth of the third man in the ring. But seemingly all to no avail, for the word comes to me from a keen boxing source that the chief arbiter has been named long ago and all along has been known to the principals, the promoters—Tex Rickard and George Getz—and sundry other persons.

In fact, it is stated by my authority, who does not wish to have his identity splattered in black ink at this time, that Tunney insisted on naming the referee before he agreed to have the battle staged in Chicago.

ED PURDY NOMINATED

ED. PURDY, one of the most capable referees in New York, is the man. Eddie has been here for some time trying to establish one of those Reno-like residences, so that he will be eligible for a license as an Illinois ring official. My informant tells me Purdy is very accomplished and as honest as the day is long, and that Tunney doesn't expect any the best of it from him, but simply wants to insure himself of an even break in the way the bout is handled once the gong rings for action.

There has been quite a boom on here for some time to have one of the millionaire sportsmen—one of Chicago's, that is, not one of Tex Rickard's own gallant 600—named as referee. He has been getting a lot of puffing in the papers and has the endorsement of everybody in the blue book, but that's about as far as it's likely to go, even if Tunney does lean toward the gang with the gelt. George Lytton, vice president and treasurer of the Henry C. Lytton Company, is the man being boosted for the job. He's had some experience in an amateur sort of a way, and his friends think he's pretty good. But who wants a novice or an amateur in there with a couple of huskies fighting for a million-dollar title before a near-three-million-dollar crowd?

GENE GUARDS AGAINST FOUL

THE identity of the referee will not be announced by the boxing commission until he steps into the ring for the bout. Neither will the judges become definitely known until time for the battle to begin. If the thing goes the limit, the judges will make the decision, with the referee casting the deciding vote if necessary. In th event of a claim of foul, the referee, under the Illinois boxing laws, will have to confer with the judges before rendering a decision. If that rule had been in effect in New York, Jack Sharkey might have been the winner on a foul over Dempsey in their recent what was it? For both judges declared it was their opinion that the Bostonian was fouled and not knocked out.

For the present, let us assume that

Big Fight Halted For Tea as Dempsey Curses Hooked Drive and Tunney Runs Out of Poetry

By FRANKLIN GRANT

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—(U.S.)—"Extrry—cxxxtr-r-ry." "Round by round description Dempsey-Tunney fight." Here it is:

First round: Dempsey led with a two-day layoff and Tunney countered with a drive into the rough of Dempsey's whiskers. Tunney bluffed an airplane flight of 300 miles to cool off and Dempsey sipped some 4 o'clock tea. They fiddled and made a good job of it, even if there was no burning Rome to accompany them. Dempsey scowled, crouched and then rushed Tunney to the ropes, beating a tattoo with his new Indian headdress. Tunney hit Dempsey's face with a volley of five syllable words and Dempsey staggered under the attack. He quickly recuperated, landed with two afternoons of light training but was shipped in the orgy of loafing by Tunney who took three days off. Dempsey drove a luncheon engagement at Tunney who responded with an invitation to spend an evening at a house party. They clinched and counted the house. Coming out of the break, Dempsey almost floored Tunney with a six syllable word which he had been practicing in secret for nearly six weeks and the bell saved the champion.

HOOKS FIRST DRIVE

Round two: Dempsey rushed out at Tunney, hooked his first drive from the tee, bobbled his approach and then Tunney, somewhat revived by the minute of rest, landed on Dempsey with two smashing utterances from Aristotle. Dempsey reeled as Tunney plunged in, and hit Tunney with some low English. Tunney protested to the referee but was over-ruled. Dempsey rushed to a race track for an afternoon with the ponies and Tunney countered with a fast trip to a honky dell where he sparred with three of the nearest edition of poetry. Dempsey tricked Tunney with some nocturnal training and Tunney countered by not training at all, thus tricking Dempsey into the belief that he did not need it at all—he was that good. They clinched. Tunney hit Dempsey on the break and Dempsey leaped in

PANTHER GRID SQUAD QUITS CAMP

CAMP HAMILTON, WINDBER, Pa. Sept. 17.—Assistant managers of the Pitt football team acted as special police last night to prevent the Panthers from indulging in too hilarious demonstration during the last night in camp. Some of the more ambitious individuals were seen sharpening pocket knives and the managers guarded tent ropes to keep the canvas from tumbling down on slumbering athletes.

A hard scrimmage yesterday afternoon and a game between the first and second teams this morning ended the fifteenth annual training period at camp Hamilton. The Pitt squad left for Pittsburgh in great condition, ready for the battle for positions on the first eleven next week.

TILDEN BATTLES LA COSTE IN NET FINAL

By ROBERT A. HEREFORD.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Phlegmatic Rene LaCoste, of France, who is known as the tennis automaton because of his machine-like game, and "Big Bill" Tilden, the temperamental actor-player, meet in the finals of the national singles tournament today to decide the identity of the world's greatest tennis player.

LaCoste, who is the defending champion, now holds that title by virtue of his victory at Forest Hills last year.

Neither Tilden nor LaCoste experienced great difficulty in winning their semi-final matches yesterday, although "Big Bill," in a histrionic mood, pretended he did.

Tilden, playing his big husky doubles partner, Francis T. Hunter, clowned about the court and finally ended a long drawn out, tiresome engagement which went 10 games for the four sets. The score was 14-12, 6-1, 4-6, 9-7. In the first set Tilden allowed Hunter to carry the play to point set 11 times before clinching it. The match required two hours and the shadows were lengthening on the slick turf courts when Johnston and LaCoste appeared for their match.

This match was as brilliant as the other was boring. Quiet, earnest, "Little Bill," who always gives his best, forced LaCoste into extra sets before succumbing to the human machine 6-2, 2-6, 6-4, 6-1. Yesterday's appearance was perhaps the plucky little Californian's last in a national tournament and he left the game which he loved as he entered it—fighting to the last ounce of his never great strength.

ALDRIDGE AND KREMER TO FACE BROOKLYN

enjoyed this fine advantage at the late date owing to their brilliance in the six-game sweep made in competition with Braves. The fact that the Buccos were able to take six in a row from the Tribe might lead some folks to the confusion that it was a walkaway, but the fans who saw any of the battles know the true state of affairs. Every game was a fight, the splendid effectiveness of the Pittsburgh pitchers making the fine result possible.

In winning the six jousts with the Braves, the Freebooters ran their unbroken string of successes to nine. Incidentally, they sent the Braves on their way to Chicago with 12 straight defeats.

FINE SLAB WORK

Although there has been a big strain on the Pirate sharpshooters in the past week or so, the hurlers have been taking the hard work willingly, all hands being ready to help in the bigger matter at hand. The double bill of today may make it necessary for another star to go to the mound with two days' rest, but Carmen Hill did it twice in succession in the past week, turning in victories on each occasion, while Lee Meadows, after trimming the Braves on Tuesday, took them on again yesterday with the same fine result.

Manager Bush will call on Victor Aldridge to work one of the games this afternoon, the chance being strong for Kremer to work in the other game. Uncle Robbie has Jess Petty, Bill Doak and Norman Plitt available. The former is a southpaw. The Dodgers will remain in town through Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, single contests to be played on these dates. The Giants will follow them into town, a double-header with the Polo Grounders being scheduled for Thursday.

Lloyd Waner made one of the greatest catches of the year as the Buccos tumbled the Braves in the sixth and final clash of the season between the two clubs. It was at the start of the third that Sprout turned in his circus feature that may have been the determining factor in the victory. Everybody in the stands would be willing to give the youngster credit for the game in view of what he showed them as he robbed Lance Richbourg. Richbourg walloped a scorching liner into the left-center pocket. An outfielder lacking speed would have had no chance to get to the ball. Lloyd had to stoop almost to the grasstops, and when the hard-hit rocket hit his hands it almost pulled him on his face, but he held to it. What a reception he received when he came to the Pirate dugout!

GUY MORRISON STARS

Henry Wertz opposed Meadows at the outset of the game, but after allowing four tallies in one and two-third innings, Wertz was supplanted by Guy Morrison, who blanked the Pirates on four hits for the remainder of the scrap. Morrison is the same fellow who made the spring training jaunt with the Pirates. He was purchased recently from Waterbury by the Braves. Guy worked as relief man in four of the six games at Forbes Field; he was impressive in every showing, especially the final game.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

WHAT city in the major baseball leagues has the wildest and most emotional fans?

This question was being discussed before yesterday's game at Forbes Field by a group of Pittsburgh and Boston players.

Don't think for an instant that the attitude of the fans in the stands and bleachers doesn't have its effect upon the individual and team play of the men on the field.

The right sort of rooting encouragement and evidence of loyal support, for which Pittsburgh fans are noted, and which has helped to carry the Pirates to within the shadow of the pennant, will often serve to keep the home players on their toes and cause them to outdo themselves during the game.

There is nothing more effective than a figurative pat on the back toward enabling a player to do his best work, or to pull himself together again after he has made a costly misplay, than to find that the crowd is still with him and for him.

ON THE other hand a chorus of boos and jeers might have the effect of disheartening the same man and causing him to make further misplays as well as to lose his fighting spirit for the time being.

The same goes for whole clubs as well as players. They all like the old "attaboy" stuff. When they get it, particularly when they are in a slump, it acts like a tonic, and when they don't get it they react in the opposite direction.

During yesterday's discussion, the Pittsburgh players were a unit in asserting that the fans of this city are the best, fairest and most loyal in the world, and Manager Donie Bush and his warriors impressed upon their hearers that their present position and bright pennant prospects are due largely to the faithful way in which Forbes Field patrons have supported the team through thick and thin.

PITCHER BOB SMITH and some of the Boston men were equally strong for the fans of the Hub as being the fairest. "They never razz any home or visiting player there," a Brave asserted, but he had to concede one exception when a Pi-

ONE of the many prominent Pittsburghers who will attend the Dempsey-Tunney bout in Chicago next Thursday night is our Mayor, Charles H. Kline. The Mayor is on record, too, with a prediction, "All my friends are against me in this," said Mayor Kline, "but I like Tunney, I think I'll have the laugh on my friends when the fight is over, I saw Tunney beat Dempsey last year. After seeing that bout I can't see anyone but Tunney in the next meeting."

HAVEY BOYLE.

NEW YORK, by the way, is quite proud of Jimmy Walker, who often is described as the best-dressed mayor of the country, but in any contest for the best-dressed mayor, even with Walker going in as a favorite, you can put our money on Pittsburgh's Mayor Kline. Both mayors are distinctive types in the matter of apparel. Often have we seen both at pretty close range. If Walker might be described as dressing after the fashion of the dancing tenor in a musical comedy, then Mayor Kline has his counterpart in those well-dressed figures of a polite drawing room play.

MAYOR KLINE, of course, is not the boxing fan Jimmy Walker is. Mayor Walker takes in nearly all the big bouts in his home city. In fact, Walker is the author of the bill, later enacted into law, which now governs boxing in New York. Naturally, Walker is keenly interested in the sport.

AT any ringside in New York watch out for Mayor Walker as he walks in headed by a squad of large, frantic policemen who clear the way of any debris to give the mayor a wide entrance. Observe natty Jimmy, in dark-colored glasses, blue shirt, with collar to match, a faultless tie, and a new skimmer turned down on one side, the whole set off with a cane which gaping yokels my tipster has the right dope and that Purdy will referee. The very fact that Purdy, who votes in New York, has been living here recently seems to bear out the information. Other candidates for the job include Joe Choynski, former Pittsburgher; Dave Barry, Davy Miller, Emil Thiry, a protege of the late George Siler, and Jimmy Gardner.

WAXMAN GIVES VIEWS

RAN into Max Waxman, manager of Joe Dundee, the welterweight champion, at the Morrison hotel yesterday. He liked Tunney to win over Dempsey last year and now he has switched. He says the wise money will be on Dempsey and he'll have a piece of it. Dempsey will be a different Dempsey this time, Max says. Max has Dundee fighting in Boston next Thursday night with Johnny Indresano. After that, he is going to take the champ to Los Angeles for a fight with Ace Hudkins, for which he is to get a $5,000 guarantee.

IKE DORGAN READY

IKE DORGAN, manager of the press arrangements for the fight, finally seems to have the situation well in hand. He has turned down everybody he can and now has only about 500 extra special five-star final applications to toss into his copious waste basket and he'll be all set. He is taking care of all of the regular fight correspondents and placing the moochers in cold storage. He has the low-down on who's who in the racket and there'll be no crashing of the four press rows at the ringside.

Ike doubts if this will be a $1,000,000 fight. He told me last night that there still are thousands of good tickets left and that he hopes the impression doesn't become general that the thing's a sell-out. Such an impression almost ruined Rickard's Dempsey-Willard show at Toledo, big empty spaces being left in the huge pine bowl. "It will go more than $2,000,000," said Ike, "and we can take care of a $3,000,000 crowd, but the folks will have to pile in here fast from out of town in the week remaining before the bout to put it over the top to capacity."

GENE'S CAMP ISOLATED

TUNNEY'S training camp at Lake Villa, Ill., is a nice easy place to get to—not. The journey is one of three to three and a half hours by train and automobile, and most of the correspondents who are covering him make their headquarters here instead of traveling to and fro. A flock of them decided out there, half way to Chicago, for four days before they quit hobnobbing with some of his rich friends and returned to resume work the other day.

and crashed a right handed bit of profanity at Tunney. The champion drove for Dempsey's chin, missed, they clinched and Tunney protested to the referee that this thing could not go on; that he had worked hard enough to earn his million and, anyway, he had an engagement for 10:30. The referee paid no heed. Dempsey threw two hard looks at Tunney, landed with a cutting remark and again Tunney protested to the referee that he belonged to the Fighter's Union and that he could not do any ever timework because he had an engagement. "It is important," he hissed at the official, as Dempsey made a vicious swing but missed the ball completely because his stance was bad. "Oh, if it's important that's different," said the referee. "Why didn't you say so in the first place. I gotta a date, too, and if you ain't got one, Jack, you better find something to do because this fight is over and you both are excused."

The description may embrace a few inaccuracies—but just a few—for this training session that Dempsey and Tunney are indulging in has ceased to be a serious thing and has become nothing but a hippodrome.

And the man most exercised over it is Tex Rickard, who suddenly discovers that his dream of a $3,000,000 gate may become nothing but a nightmare of $2,250,000.

Champ Urges "Secret" Pay

By GENE TUNNEY.

LAKE VILLA, Ill., Sept. 17.—A few of my opinions, which may escape print, should be of interest to readers of this column.

I recently told the newspapermen—and this thing has been uppermost in my mind for some time, that I am and always have been fundamentally against the publication of the amounts of prize-fight purses. No logic can furnish me with a valid reason why the sum a champion gets from a bout should be made public any more than annual receipts of the Standard Oil Company.

Thousands of millionaires make more a year than I do, and yet they would fight through every court in the land to prevent their earnings from being made public. Anyway, I don't believe that it helps the boxing game. I believe that people come to a ring to see a fight and not to see a man who is going to make a million dollars at that fight. As for the big purses, I don't know just how long they will continue, but there must be a limit. These things move in cycles. Someone asked me if I thought they would ever reach five or six millions, but I hardly think so. I believe that they are about as high now as they ever will go.

BOXING GAME HELPED

A great deal has been written to the effect that if Dempsey won back his title it would boost the boxing game. I can't figure this. I believe that the best thing that can happen in any division of the game is for the title to change hands every so often.

Statistics will show that following our fight at Philadelphia, when Dempsey lost his title, the heavyweight boxing game was given distinct impetus. I cite you the crowds drawn at Madison Square Garden during the past winter by the heavyweights, not to mention also the numerous small fights throughout the country. Personally, I believe boxing is going to enjoy more popularity than it ever has before. The war renewed interest in it and its regulation by constantly improving boxing bills will put the game on a higher pedestal than ever before.

raté chimed in with "How about Earl Smith?"

When it came to taking a vote on the most rabid and demonstrative fans in the big circuits, there were the usual references to the "wild men" in the St. Louis bleachers and attention was called to the recent bottle-throwing rowdyism in Chicago, but Jacques Fournier, the big first baseman of the Braves, downed all opposition when he figuratively took the floor.

"You're all wrong," he said. "When it comes to rabid demonstrations the Brooklyn fans are in a class of their own. The gamegoers of no other city are even close.

"DON'T misunderstand me as saying that the Brooklynites are not good fans in a general sense," Fournier continued. "They are strong for their club, they turn out in large numbers every day there is a game, even when the team is losing, and their large and regular attendance makes the Brooklyn franchise one of the most profitable in the league.

"It's a great ball town and the fans are all that could be desired in that respect. Why, only three years ago when the Robins were in the fight for the 1924 pennant the Brooklyn club made a profit of $400,000.

"But in showing their feelings, either in favor of a player whom they like, or against another player who happens not to be in their good graces, they are the champions of the whole baseball world.

"IF THEY ever start out to ride you—oh, boy! And, believe me, I have had some personal experience.

"Back in 1925, when I told the Brooklyn management that I had made up my mind to retire on account of the abuse I had to stand for at the hands of some of the Brooklyn fans, conditions were so bad and I heard such language from some of the gambling element around first base that I was forced to ask my wife to cease attending the games.

"The great majority of Brooklyn fans, I know, are as considerate and as well-behaved as those to be found anywhere, but that gang near first base would go to any extreme to vent their spleen and I simply could not allow my wife to be present at the games.

"When I went back to Brooklyn for the first time following the announcement of my retirement, we were to play the Giants, and both teams were late, not reaching the field until after 2 o'clock. You should have heard the reception I got. Wow! It seemed as if that big gathering of 40,000 fans had been lying in wait for me, and as soon as I stepped upon the field the greatest storm of boos that I ever heard in my life broke loose. Did they raze me? Why, that outburst of booing could be heard from the Flatbush all the way to Times Square.

"AND try to imagine what I got later when I came up to bat for the first time in the game with the bases full and Kent Greenfield, who was pitching for New York, struck me out on three pitches.

"Ordinarily, that would have taken the heart out of any man, but the fates must have pitied me for luck turned in my favor. First I drove in two runs with a hit, then I knocked in two more with another hit and finally in the eleventh inning I got hold of one and hit it over the right field fence.

"Now for their other side—the affectionate side. Playing left field for the Dodgers for more than 16 years, Zack Wheat became such an idol to those left field bleacherites that they considered it an outrage to have any one else even suggested for his place. They are actually still clamoring back there for the return of Wheat.

"EVEN when Manager Robinson wished to look over a recruit or two and sent out one or other of them to left field during practice before a game, those fans refused to stand for the appearance of any one else in Wheat's place, and they booed and razzed the youngsters and even threw pop bottles at them until they retired from the field and Wheat came back to his place.

"You could not even begin to picture the scene that was enacted one day when Gus Felix muffed a fly while playing in Wheat's place in left field. They yelled for Wheat during all the rest of the game.

"They're great fans, understand, as good as any in the land, but they sure do show their likes and dislikes in a manner that leaves no room for doubt as to how you stand."

FOURNIER, who will celebrate his 35th birthday anniversary in less than two weeks, is of the smart type of player and no doubt will be a big league manager in a year or two.

He still is one of the most dangerous batters in the majors, and in this connection he says he always likes to hit at Forbes Field, though admitting that his luck went wrong in the series that ended here yesterday when, prior to his single in the second inning of Thursday's game he went to bat 14 times in succession without getting a hit.

Not because they are both of French extraction, but as an honest opinion based on close baseball observation and experience, Fournier declares that there isn't a better pitcher in the game than Remy Kremer of the Pirates. "Not quite a Mathewson," he said, "but one of the greatest of the present day."

from the provinces look at with great awe.

MAYOR KLINE, on the other hand, can take his boxing or leave it alone. Mainly, he is interested in the big fights as he is interested in any kind of a huge spectacle attracting thousands and thousands of persons.

Should Pittsburgh's Mayor meet with New York's Mayor at the fight, a photographer could get a dandy picture of the two best-dressed mayors of America.

A FUNNY event of last year's edition of the Dempsey-Tunney affair was the way a lot of the boys got dolled up to see the big affair. Mr. Charles Doyle came up with one of the best cracks after that night of rain, which turned a fine-looking assemblage into something resembling yesterday's wet newspaper. Said Mr. Doyle of a gentleman who had taken a seat in the front row: "He came in looking like Beau Brummel and went out looking like Nat Wills."

IN THE current issue of "Liberty" a writer has a pretty good time quoting various boxing reporters on their views of the much-mooted foul and the general controversy resulting from the Dempsey-Sharkey bout. With very few reporters agreeing on any two points, the magazine writer admits himself baffled. However, mistakes will occur. They crop out in the strangest places. For instance, in citing a part of what the present writer said of the embroglio, the magazine author refers to some man named Havey J. Boyle, when the paper, from which he culled his excerpt plainly, said in bold face type the article was written by a man named Havey J. Boyle.

IT CAN be seen, then, from this that while boxing reporters (and they admit it) often disagree on main points, sometimes the powers of close observation in minor matters are denied even those boys who in good humor and with considerable logic poke fun at the boxing reporters.

THE article in question, however, lent a thought. It is that a pretty good way to prepare to write about or to watch one is to go to the bout without a preconceived notion of what fighter is going to win. Often, a spectator, pulling for one boxer fails to note the points scored by the favorite's opponent. Perhaps, too, a writer (maybe this present writer for all we know although we try to guard against it) after having picked a man to win unconsciously directs his vision with his prediction in mind.

THIS is what the magazine critic was driving at. He noted that the most of the boys who picked Dempsey to win saw no foul while others who picked Sharkey to win were certain of a foul.

If a man makes a prediction on a fight he is apt to become partisan because every man wants his guess to be right for the sake of his vanity, even conceding he admits his prediction is nothing but a guess.

THEY'RE READY TO FOOL SOMEBODY

AND THEY DON'T CARE IF IT'S BUCS

Here, fans, are three New York Yankee backstops who will attempt to outguess at least nine National League batters in the World's Series. Judging from the complexion of the race today, it is not unlikely that it will be the Pirates who will bounce foul tips onto their chest protectors. They are, left to right, Pat Collins, Benny Bengough and John Grabowski.

SCHOLASTIC GRID SEASON OPENS

By VERNON S. SWARTSFAGER

The first struggle of the gridiron for the Pittsburgh district, is being played this afternoon at Emsworth, with the Ben Avon High School eleven combatting Mars High School. Little Washington, Hank Day's W. P. I. A. L. championship crew is down the Ohio River battling with Coraopolis on its home grounds. Sharpsville High School invaded Freedom's grid while South Union tackled Brownsville. New Castle got its first test today when Grove City's squad was taken on in an engagement.

Coach Mathes had his Ben Avon machine in fine fettle for the opening contest. Ken Hahn was at quarterback; D. Irwin and J. Grunnegle, halfbacks; E. Moran at fullback; H. McGowan and Stinson at the ends; E. Huey and H. McGregor, tackles; E. Roberts and J. Sterling, guards, with J. Zimmerman at center. Ruttenbush is the referee; Sterritt, umpire, and Clelland, head linesman.

DUKES HINDERED BY HEAT

On account of the intense heat, Homer Layden has been easing up on his Dukes; for the last few days they have had no intensive scrimmage and have been content with limbering up calesthenics, Skull and signal drill together with dummy practice. John Weibel has been not so easy with his linemen, however, working the guards and tackles especially hard.

They are priming for the game at Olean with St. Bonaventure and are determined to start off the season with a win.

Simeon Velar, Lackfield flash on last year's Dukes and afterwards picked on the all Tri-state conference first team, is back in the line-up. He is especially remembered for his work in the Juniata game and the Geneva game where he never quit trying till carried of the field.

Sally Discovers the Reason Of Her Father's Going From Her Home Again

What Has Gone Before

SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the prop and mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who has not lived with her mother for years. The family consists of MRS. JEROME, the twins, BEAU and MILLIE, and Sally herself. Mrs. Jerome enjoys poor health, so Sally does the housework mornings and office work for MR. PEEVEY down town afternoons. In the flat below the Jeromes lives TED SLOAN, an automobile salesman, who wants Sally to marry him and keep on working. But the only man who interests her is JOHN NYE, whose real estate office is across the hall from Mr. Peevey's. Nye hires Millie as his secretary and becomes blindly infatuated with her. But Millie confesses that while she likes him a great deal, she honestly prefers a bond salesman named DAVIDSON, and she tries to get him a job with Nye. Davidson develops a great fondness for Sally, who will have none of him. She begs him to keep away from Nye's office, though, feeling that his presence there will make trouble between Millie and Nye. Millie goes to the hospital for an operation, and John Nye foots the bill. Mrs. Jerome sends for her husband, but by the time he comes Millie is better. Sally does her work for John Nye, who offers her a permanent place in his office when Mr. Peevey retires from business, as he intends to do. But Sally makes up her mind not to take it. One night while she is working late for him Ted Sloan calls for her, telling her that her mother wants her at home at once. Sally thinks it is for the purpose of getting supper for her and Mr. Jerome and starts home. She leaves Ted at the back door of the flat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

MRS. JEROME looked at her coldly, and Sally saw that, in some way of her own, she had figured it out that Sally was to blame for whatever misfortune had just occurred in the little home.

"You knew you should have been home at 7," she said, accusingly, and then ran on with her story:

"Well, along about half past seven or so your father came into the sitting room where I was—and would you believe it?—he had his bag all packed and in his hand! 'I'm going,' he said. 'Everything's just the way it used to be—no meals ready, no beds made, the house the same old pig pen it always was! I'm going back where I came from.' And with that he walked out on me just the way he did nine years ago!" She covered her face with her handkerchief again and rocked to and fro in her very real agony.

Sally watched her for a minute or two. She saw that there was nothing for her to do. . . . After all, no one of us can do anything in the face of big misfortunes that come to those we love. Real trouble has to be conquered alone, always.

So, after a bit, Sally got up and left her.

The door of the room her father had spent the night in stood open. Within the bed was unmade, the ashtray still filled with cigar bands and ashes, the floor littered with papers.

In the bathroom the same chaos reigned. The bath mat, still damp and wrinkled, lay on the floor. The tub had not been scrubbed out. Nor had the wash bowl, and on the mirror above it was a large smudge of lather from shaving soap.

On the table in the dining room lay the dried-up remnants of the ham sandwiches, and four soiled napkins.

The sitting room wasn't so bad, but it was dusty and it did not have the fresh, clean look that it should have had. As Sally stood looking down mournfully at the pale-pink blossoms of her begonia plant her mother came up behind her and spoke once more with extreme bitterness.

"Of course there must be a woman behind all this," she said. "No man leaves his wife just because a meal isn't on time. . . . There must always have been a woman in this case. Somebody that your papa cares for more than he cares for me and his children."

Sally wondered. . . . She thought about the men she knew. They all seemed to love order and comfort. All of them—Mr. Peevey, with his mid-day lunch that had to be served to him on the dot. John Nye, with his appreciation of her neat work and her gift of sandwiches. Even Ted, who managed to wear clean linen every day, although he wore his suits until they became shiny and out-of-date.

Yes, men were neat, orderly animals, and Sally could well believe that her father had told the unkind truth when he walked out of his wife's happy-go-lucky, lazy, careless life.

But she did not say so.

She saw that her mother wanted to think that another woman had stolen him from her—that she did not want to blame herself for the thing that had happened. Poor little helpless Mother! So unable to manage things and make a go of them!

"Let's forget all about it dearest," she said tenderly. "We'll get along together, you and I. Don't you worry." And her mother clung to her as if she were the one safe and solid thing in a world that was slipping away from her. Sally felt her tears on her cheeks and kissed them away.

On the last day in October Mr. Peevey told Sally that he was going to close his office on the last day of November.

He told her just as he was leaving late in the gray, rainy afternoon. And after he was gone, Sally sat at her desk, staring at the ground-glass pane of the door that led into the hall.

Through that pane she seemed to see John Nye at work in his office across the hall, as she had seen him so often. His dark head bent over his task, his long, fine fingers drumming on the desk or nervously fiddling with a lead pencil. Her heart seemed to close around the thought of him.

Moved by one of those strong, irresistible impulses that come to people only a few times in all their lives, she stood up and walked across the hall to his door. She had no idea of what she wanted to say to him. She simply felt that she had to see him.

Miss Kriss, his near-sighted office girl, sat alone, busily tap-tapping on her typewriter. She stopped work and glanced up as Sally came in.

"Mr. Nye isn't here," she said, as she saw Sally's eyes go straight to the door of the private office. "He's going out to a dinner party tonight, and he left early. I think he was going to stop in at Bethlehem Hospital on his way home."

Bethlehem Hospital! Where Millie, almost well now, lay waiting for him, surrounded by his roses.

"I see," said Sally, dully. And whatever she might have said to him died in her heart, then and there. The eager light in her eyes went out, too, as Miss Kriss might have seen if she had not been so near-sighted, poor thing.

"I must have been crazy to go over there at all," thought Sally, when she was back in the quiet safety of Mr. Peevey's office. "Thank heaven that he wasn't there! Goodness knows how I could have explained my rushing in, if he had been there! I guess it will be a good thing for me to get away from this building next month. I'm losing my common sense around this place!"

That night when she turned into Trellis street the first thing she saw was Beau's fiery red car standing before the house.

It was then that she remembered that tomorrow would be the first of the month and that he and Mabel had arranged to give up their flat on that day.

When she went upstairs she found that they had not waited for the first, but had moved in already. Their trunk stood in the hallway outside Beau's old room, and within they were hard at work unpacking their suitcases.

"Isn't it lovely to have Beau at home again?" Mrs. Jerome wanted to know when Sally went into her room to ask what she would like for her supper.

Sally said nothing. She loved Beau with all her heart, but she was not the least bit sure that it was a good thing for him to be living at home now that he was married. She hoped for the best, and secretly feared the worst.

But Mrs. Jerome had no such misgivings. Sally had not seen her so light-hearted since the departure of her husband, two weeks before.

"It's so nice to have a man at the head of the table again!" she cooed, beaming upon him like a round-faced sun as he carved the pot-roast at supper time.

"Well, I'm glad to be here, mother," answered Beau grandly, as if he were doing them all a great favor by coming back home to live.

"I wonder what Millie will say when she knows about it," thought

LEGION DEFAMER ACCUSED AS SWINDLER

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Arthur F. Lorenz, formerly editorial writer for the Illinois Staats-Zeitung, Chicago German daily, who got himself into hot water some years ago for libeling the American Legion, was named in a Federal warrant issued here yesterday.

The warrant charges him with misuse of the mails in a $2,000,000 conspiracy to defraud. At the same time postal inspectors here from St. Paul, Minn., took Clarence A. Cochran, 40, of Chicago, into custody. He was arraigned before United States Commissioner Beitler and held in $10,000 bonds. The hearing was postponed to September 20.

The conspiracy is alleged to be based on the purchase of the St. Paul Volks-Zeitung. The paper was said to have been owned by Cochran. The owner and others with him, including Lorenz, borrowed about $2,000,000 from subscribers and issued promissory notes. The subscribers lost amounts varying between $500 and $25,000. The case was brought before the grand jury in St. Paul.

Lorenz in 1921, while editorial writer of the Illinois Staats-Zeitung, wrote an article headed "The Finest of the Fine," in which he used epithets for the legionnaires, branding them with German equivalents for "bums," "scum of the earth" and the like. Lorenz was promptly indicted. Sentenced to six months in prison, he served only a few days, being released on a technicality.

RUSS NOBLEMAN IN STABLE JOB

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—The son-in-law of the former dowager empress of Russia for more than a year has been in charge of the breeding stables of George Rasmussen, millionaire president of the National Tea Company, of Lake Forest and Chicago, it was disclosed here today.

The stables are near Copenhagen, Denmark. Not far away is the residence of the dowager empress, Maria Feodorowna, which she shares with her daughter and son-in-law, Col. Nicholai Koulikowsky, husband of the Grand Duchess Olga, a sister of the late Czar.

Now, to Find An Uncrashable Airship

By Universal Service.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 17.—Boatswain's Mate Alva Starr, U. S. Navy, jumped with a parachute from the U. S. Navy semi-dirigible J-3, inflated a collapsible rubber boat during the descent, landed safely in the waters of Barnegat Bay and rowed to shore.

Starr, who is instructor at the Navy parachute school here, made a free fall from the J-3 at an altitude of 2,500 feet. The parachute opened after a drop of 200 feet. When he had reached an altitude of 500 feet the boat had been inflated from a flask of compressed aid Starr carried.

AIR MAIL HERE ONE OF MOST PROFITABLE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The Cleveland - Youngstown - Pittsburgh airmail line carried 4,741 pounds of mail, covered 16,959 air miles and showed an income of $14,020 between April 21, when the line was started, and July 1, the Department of Commerce announced today.

This line is regarded as one of the most profitable of the entire group of airmail routes.

Marriage Laws Not Fair, Cry Women

By Universal Service.

BERKELEY, Cal., Sept. 17.—Aroused by action of a Los Angeles court granting petition of a husband for alimony from his wife, clubwomen of Berkeley and Oakland met here to charge that since California had laws on matrimony and money, they have favored men.

"Why were 13 bills regarding marriage and money introduced before the last Legislature," Mrs. Harriet A. Haas, Oakland attorney, asked the gathering as she denounced women's status in California as regard marriage laws.

"These bills were introduced because women of California are demanding something definite about their marriage rights, and what they may expect of community properties and moneys," she answered.

With husbands now turning on wives for alimony, why does a wife have to probate community property after her husband's death, whereas a husband does not, the clubwomen asked, pointing out that the "unfair laws" give a husband control over community property while he is living.

The so-called "gin marriage" law adopted in California at the last Legislature was lauded by the women, but they took exception to the new name given the law.

COOLIDGE PERMITS ALASKAN LAND SHIFT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—President Coolidge has signed an executive order withdrawing tracts adjoining the college grant near Fairbanks, Alaska, for use of the biological survey, the Interior Department announced today. The land will be transferred to the experiment station of the biological survey. Secretary of Interior Work recommended the transfer.

PHILADELPHIA TO JOIN FIGHT ON KLAN

International News Service Wire.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—Drastic measures to oust the Ku Klux Klan from the state by throwing the organization into bankruptcy and bringing its alleged "secret and pernicious workings" to public view are in process in this city as well as in Pittsburgh, it was revealed here today.

Dayton W. Laubach, a jeweler of 7018 Woodland avenue, who caused the arrest of Paul W. Inter, grand kleagle of the Klan in this district, and Charles B. Lewis, state leader, said he has "a tremendous amount of affidavits made by former members of the Klan asking for the arrest of seven leaders of the Klan here against whom criminal charges will be filed in the Federal Courts.

The affidavits, Laubach said, will be sent to Pittsburgh within 24 hours to add to those taken by a former member of the Western Pennsylvania Klan.

Besides sending the documents to Pittsburgh, the seven leaders of the organization in this district will be arrested and faced with the charges here, Laubach added.

Many of the statements in the affidavits Laubach alleges are substantiated in writing by members of the local police force.

FUND PROMISED TO FIX LEVEES

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—A definite promise that $2,000,000 for immediate repair of more dangerous Mississippi levee breaks will be obtained from miscellaneous government funds was made to President Coolidge by Gen. Dorothy Dix Says:

... So Complicated to Be a Modern Woman, It's a Wonder Anybody Is Willing to Undertake It

DOROTHY DIX—MAG SAT Sept 17

BEING a woman has always been the most complicated career that any human being could possibly follow, because every woman has to be a jack of all trades.

Even the common, or garden variety, of woman is expected to pull off a satisfactory job of being, at one and the same time a vamp, a model of propriety as wife and mother, a cook, a seamstress, a charwoman, a purchasing agent, a head of the commissary supplies, a sick nurse, a baby nurse, a diplomat, a judge, a priest, a teacher, a hostess, a counselor, with a few other scattering occupations thrown in for good measure.

DOROTHY DIX

If in the past, however, a woman has had a full day's work just fulfilling the duties and obligations that appertain to her sex, consider the difficulties of her lot now when all sorts of frills and furbelows have been added to the business of being a woman, and she is confronted with problems of which her grandmother never even dreamed.

Life is certainly a strenuous proposition for women in these days of female emancipation, for in attaining her new liberties woman has not been able to unload any of her old burdens. She must still perform all of the traditional functions of her sex and then grapple with her new difficulties. She must be all that her grandmother was and do all that her grandmother did, and then some.

GRANDMOTHER must have been versatile to have been able to be a good actor in all the various roles she was required to fill, but, at least, she wasn't expected to be a miracle-worker as the modern woman is. If grandmother was homely, she was homely. If she was fat, she was fat. If she was a bag of bones, she was a bag of bones, and that was all there was to it. But a woman who accepts her looks as they are, and is as ugly as God made her, is looked upon nowadays as being a quitter and laying down on her job.

Modern standards require a woman to be easy on the eyes, and we expect a woman who hasn't been endowed by nature with a beautiful complexion to acquire one at the drug store, we expect a woman who has hair like a poker to be decently permanently waved, and that she who is inclined to embonpoint shall starve herself down to a boyish figure, and that the living skeleton shall pad her angles out by a fat-producing diet. Certainly, nothing has added more to the white woman's burden than this demand that every woman shall be beautiful, though ugly, and that she shall stay perpetually young.

AND there is a the question of marriage. Grandmother didn't have to bother her head about that, because it was up to the men, and they settled it for her. A man either sought your hand in marriage and led you to the altar, or else you hung upon the family tree. Not so nowadays when women have to be go-getters if they get married at all, and who have to capture a husband with one hand while they work a smoke screen with the other, behind which they conceal their nefarious designs upon him.

Nor did grandmother have to lie awake at night debating with herself the relative merits of a husband and a job, because there were not any jobs worth having in her day but the wife-job.

But the modern girl acquires wrinkles trying to decide which is the best for the long pull, a mahogany top desk or a gas range; crying babies or bonuses; whether she would rather work in some man's kitchen for nothing, or in an office or store for a pay envelope on Saturday; whether it is better to put up with the crotchets of a boss that she can leave, or the cantankerousness of a husband that she can't leave; whether a latchkey and freedom are worth more than being bound to those she loves and who need her.

AND, more grief that grandmother escaped, she never had to worry over whether it was better to go on with her profession after marriage, or give it up, whether she could better help her husband by earning the price of angel's food outside of the home, or making mean biscuit in it. For grandmother hadn't spent years of time, and thousands of dollars fitting herself to follow some gainful occupation, and she never had to consider the economic waste it was for a high-salaried woman to give up her job in the office to take the place of a low-priced cook in the kitchen.

Motherhood was a simple proposition to grandmother. She had never heard of birth control, and she wasted no time cogitating over whether she had a right to bring children into the world that she had no way of supporting, or to whom she was likely to give weak bodies, or a bad heredity. She shouldered that responsibility on Providence and washed her hands of all blame in the matter, even if she had a dozen little sickly babies that she couldn't even feed or clothe.

AND if grandmother married a widower all she had to do was to put flowers on her predecessor's grave, but nowadays half the time the widower's No. 2 wife has to learn to act natural when she meets her husband's first wife out at dinner. And even the stepmother job, which always had enough tacks in it, acquires a few more spikes when the children's mother is living around the corner and watching to see how you treat them. For, while she may have deserted them herself, she isn't going to see them put upon by another woman.

All of which goes to show that being a woman has got to such a complicated understanding that it is a wonder that any one has the courage to undertake it.

SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON

By HELEN ROWLAND

GLORIFYING THE DUMBBELL

BE NOT deceived, my Daughter, when a man saith unto thee, "Go to! I could not ENDURE life with a stupid woman!"

For, verily, verily, NO woman is stupid, in any man's eyes, who AGREETH with all his opinions and laugheth at all his witticisms!

Nay, NO damsel is a dumbbell who applaudeth in the right place, and cryeth, "Hear! Hear!"

And a woman who can be silent in ONE language is more 'interesting" than she who seeketh to be scintillating in seven languages. Yea, she is accounted "mysterious!"

But a damsel with 'opinions" and "convictions" affecteth a man as a cold shower on a Winter morning. She giveth him a SHOCK!

Then consider the Lorelei, and be wise. For she combed her hair and sang her song, and SAID nothing! And no man could resist her!

Go to. What will blonde hair avail thee, if thou art afflicted with a brunette temperament and the moods of a prima donna?

HELEN ROWLAND

What will beauty profit thee if thou art gifted with a ready wit and a sharp tongue?

For a plain woman may overcome her handicap with humility, and conceal her intelligence with dissimulation and sympathy.

But wisecracks in the mouth of a BEAUTY affright a man as a weapon in the hands of a small boy; and wisdom in the mouth of a Sweet Woman is as lemon to his teeth.

And Solomon, himself, had torn his beard and rent his garments, had he suspected that there was an IDEA afloat amongst all his seven hundred wives!

SAFE
SOME MEN WILL TAKE EVERY PRECAUTION TO PROTECT THEIR WORLDLY GOODS - AND YET TAKE EVERY CHANCE WITH THEIR GREATER TREASURES!
NEVER MIND DEAR, WE'LL START OVER!
FAMINE, FIRE AND FLOOD HAVE WELDED DEAR ONES CLOSER - BUT GOOD FORTUNE HAS OFTEN WEDGED THEM FAR APART!

By FAY KING.

LATE at night when you pass even the most unpretentious little place of business you will notice that above the safe they have a light. At all times when the watchman passes he can see that no robbers are at work.

When a man is transacting business he takes every precaution to investigate the integrity of those with whom he is dealing.

Contracts are often drawn up between the best of friends. Receipts are given. Notes are signed. Not because of distrust, but because it is a business protection for both!

Yet many of these men who would not think of risking a dollar of their money, who would not consider for a moment hiring or doing business with a man whose business record is not good, will take all sorts of risks in their social life.

They will indulge in social life, friends and dissipation that in time will rob them of greater treasures than worldly goods—home, wife and children!

These men will associate with booze hounds, gamblers and social sharks of a caliber they would not consider for one instant if money, instead of morals, was at stake.

Many young married couples long for and plan to attain social and business success that will prove in the end more unfortunate than fortunate.

Dissatisfaction, envy, pretense, deceit and unhappiness often come with success, while those who lament the misfortunes that have come upon them are often drawn closer together for having weathered storms together in trust and hope!

Many a successful man needs for himself the protection and precaution he gives the safe in his office lest he lose greater values in life than are locked in the safe!

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Arthritis, Curse of Ancients, Still Flourishes

OUT of Berlin comes an interesting story about the ancient Egyptians. Thirty thousand mummies have been submitted to the X-ray and from the results of these examinations much was learned concerning the physical disabilities of 3,000 years and more ago.

DR. COPELAND

The report is extremely interesting. It shows about the teeth, for instance, that those who worked as slaves and sweated under the hot sun of the Nile, had undamaged teeth. But royalty, those who ate soft food and dined sumptuously every day, had badly decayed teeth.

Leprosy, syphilis and tuberculosis were uncommon. The most serious of the diseases found was arthritis. This appears to have been the curse of ancient days.

In modern times we have endless numbers of arthritis victims. There is much confusion in the medical profession as to how to classify these ailments. It is believed they come as the result of some sort of an infection, but their methods of attack are not uniform.

In one type the tissues in the joint are involved. The ligaments and lining membrane become inflamed. In another type, there are fever, accumulation of fluids in the joint and changes in the bones and cartilages.

There is one particularly dreadful kind of arthritis. It is known as "arthritis deformans" and is well named because of the altered shape and deformities of the joints produced by it.

Since it is probable that the arthritis is due to an infection, every effort should be made to locate it. Bad teeth and abscessed tonsils are common seats of the exciting trouble. Disease of the gall bladder may be responsible.

Of course, a disease so serious as this, and so deforming if it is neglected, must have the wisest and best of care. Your family physician should be called in so that no time shall be lost in beginning the treatment. Much can be done with proper care.

What's the Answer?

1. What is a cenotaph?
2. What is the Fourth Estate?
3. What is the meaning of the words "Chop Suey?"
4. Why are the stones in streams almost always round?
5. About how much higher is the cost of living than it was before the war?
6. What is Volapuk?
7. Was Moses found in the bulrushes?
8. In what famous battle in pre-revolutionary days, on this continent, were the leaders of the opposing forces both killed?
9. What language did Jesus speak?
10. Who said "When pain and anguish wring the brow, a ministering angel thou?"

The answers to these questions may be found in Monday's paper.

Here are the answers to yesterday's questions.

1. A carillon is a set of stationary bells so hung and arranged as to be capable of being played upon, either by hand or by machinery.

2. At the close of the Revolutionary War, the Government called in all the Continental money. With it were a large number of counterfeits, on each of which, as received, was stamped the word "Dam," a contraction of the Latin damnatus (condemned). A continental dam thus came to mean something that was absolutely worthless.

3. The United States is only one of a number of states which have used the eagle in various forms as an emblem. Among them are the Etruscans, Romans, the Byzantine Empire, Germany, Russia, Prussia, Poland and France.

4. A kind of eucalyptus, or bluegum, which grows in Australia, is the tallest tree in the world. Individual trees of this species have been known to grow 400 feet tall.

5. When the American Army invaded Mexico, a favorite song in the camps was Burns' "Green Grow the Rushes, O." The Mexicans finally began to call the Americans by the first two words, which they pronounced "grin go." Hence "Gringo."

6. The first postage stamp was invented by James Chalmers, printer of Dundee, in 1839. England issued its first adhesive stamp in 1840, and the United States issued them in 1841.

7. Because of the light streaks made in the sky by meteors, we know that there is an appreciable amount of air as high as 20 or 40 miles above the earth.

8. The Mennonites are members of a Protestant denomination which is named after Menno Simons (1492-1559). They are opposed to taking oaths, to military service, to theological learning and to infant baptism.

9. Edward Bellamy wrote "Looking Backward." It has been called the first American utopia of the industrial age, glorifying science and invention as the savior of mankind from the curse of nameless drudgery.

10. Our word dollar comes from the German thal (valley). There was a silver mining town in North Bohemia called Joachimstal, or Joachim's Valley. In the sixteenth century there was a silver piece coined there which was called Joachimsthaler, which soon was contracted to thaler. This word passed to Denmark, and reached us as dollar.

Sally Discovers the Reason Of Her Father's Going From Her Home Again

Sally, anxiously. "I'm afraid she won't be very happy when she finds that Beau and Mabel have taken her room away from her."

She was pretty sure that there would be fireworks when Millie did find it out, as a matter of fact.

And her eyes were full of shadow as she watched Beau hack the meat to pieces with a clumsy knife. Beau did not know anything about carving. But he thought he did. He thought very well of himself, most of the time, and Mrs. Jerome helped him out.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

MILLIE came home from the the hospital on the first Sunday in November. It was a chilly day, full of high winds and driving rain.

At 10 o'clock John Nye telephoned that he was going to bring her home in his closed car and wanted to know if Mrs. Jerome would like to drive with him to the hospital.

"I surely would love to go, Mr. Nye!" twittered Mrs. Jerome, smiling and nodding into the telephone as if he could see her face from his end of the wire. "I'll go and get dressed right away!"

She lumbered into her bedroom.

"I'll say she's getting dressed!" declared Mabel, the disrespectful one, 10 minutes later. "She's put on a hug-me-tight and a silk muffler and a short coat and a long coat over her dress! She looks like a tramp out for a hike. What do you call the ones who carry their whole wardrobe on their backs—bundle stiffs? Well, she looks just like a bundle stiff!"

She began to giggle, and Beau laughed with her from the davenport where he was stretched out, reading and smoking.

"Mother suffers from the cold, Mabel," Sally said quietly, as she put another shovelful of cannel coal in the grate. "I wouldn't try to be funny at mother's expense if I were you."

Mabel let out another wild giggle. "That's where the old girl's got it on all of us! She's funny without trying to be!"

Sally set her lips and went on brushing up the ashes around the glowing grate.

She was very tired of having Mabel around the house. She was sick to death, she told herself, of the sound of Mabel's silly little laugh. Disgusted with Mabel because of the way she made fun of Mrs. Jerome. Tired of picking up after Mabel, who seemed to think that Sally was her bodyservant just because she was living in the same flat with her.

Mabel had a nasty little way of ordering her about. "Come here, Sally, and hook up my dress!" she would call; or, "Sally, it's 8 o'clock. Put my coffee on the table!"

"But I can stand all that, if only she and Beau pay their board," Sally had been telling herself all week.

And now it was Sunday—and the board money, which should have been paid into her hand the night before, had not been paid. Nor had either Beau or Mabel said a single word about it.

So Sally was worried, as she went from room to room, dusting mahogany surfaces, watering the plants, setting the dining room table.

"Put on an extra plate today, Sally. I'll ask Mr. Nye to have dinner with us when he brings Millie home," Mrs. Jerome said breathlessly as she passed through the room when John Nye came for her.

Standing at the front bay-window, hidden by the curtains, Sally watched him help her mother into his big closed automobile.

"I'll never care for any man but him," she told herself as she stood there, plaiting the thin starched muslin between her small fingers.

And yet, she reasoned, women did forget their first disappointment in love. They married and were happy. You saw it happening every day.

"A penny for your thoughts, Simple Sis!" burst out the irrepressible Mabel from behind her, and Sally jumped. "What are you doing—still living in Dream street?"

She was standing between the curtains in the doorway and as Sally turned around from the window, she began to beckon to her with a crooked finger. "I want to show you something," she mouthed, making no sound with her lips, and Sally followed her out of her bedroom.

"Take a look at this!" she cried when she had locked the door and pulled a large pasteboard box from under the bed. "But don't say a word about it. I haven't told Beau I bought it, and he'll raise the roof when he finds out about it! He doesn't want me to have a thing!"

She pulled a coat of soft golden-brown fur from the tissue paper wrappings in the box. A short coat with a great puffy collar and great fluffy cuffs and a lining of almond-green satin.

"I paid $25 down on it yesterday," she whispered, "and I'm going to pay 10 bucks a week for 10 weeks more. Then it'll be mine. Isn't it slick?"

Sally admitted that it was. She looked at the coat with eyes full of longing. She would have loved to own a coat just like it.

"You're a dumb cluck not to get some decent-looking clothes yourself," said Mabel with vigor. "If you were something snappy for once you'd have me and Millie looking like Queen Mary's hat. What do you do with the money you make, anyway? Stow it away in the bank?"

Sally smiled. "No, I don't put it in the bank, Mabsy," she replied quietly. "And now that we're on the question of money: Who's going to pay your board? You or Beau? Because I should have had it last night. You two will have to pay it on the dot, Mabsy. You both make good money."

Mabel had the fur coat back into its snowy wrappings. She laughed.

"Sure, we make good money, but we don't make enough of it!" she explained. "You'd better go to Beau about the board bill. I've made up my mind to keep what I make for my clothes from now on. I'm tired of looking like like something out of a museum."

Sally went straight to Beau, who had a story of his own. "I forgot to go to the cashier for my pay envelope yesterday," he told her. "I did, for a fact."

And for another fact, Sally believed him!

"I'll have to have it tomorrow, Beau," she said. "The rent should have been paid a week ago." It seemed to Sally that she was always trying to get the rent together. The months were so short, somehow.

At high noon John Nye's great purring car turned in at the driveway, and he came up the stairs, actually carrying Millie's light figure in his arms.

"You great big prizefighter, you!" she cried breathlessly, when he set her down upon the davenport before the fire. Her blue eyes were wide and bright with seeming admiration.

Then she turned them upon Beau and Mabel. "How nice to see you here!" she said in her very sweetest, softest way. She was always on her best behavior when John Nye or any other man, was around.

"I think maybe you'd better help me to my room," she remarked, looking back at him. "I'm pretty tired after the ride, and I'd better lie down and rest for a while."

It was then that little Mabel spoke up. "You know, Beau and I are in your old room, Millie. We're living here," she said quickly. And she blushed a bit, guilty, for she knew that Millie did not know it. "You're in your old room with Sally again, darling."

The darling did not look much like a darling then. She went white to the lips, and her eyes seemed to grow fairly black with anger.

Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer

BOYS! I'VE JUST BEEN THINKING—
YOU KNOW THEY WANT ME TO BRING TWO MEN TO THE HOUSE-PARTY!
HOW ABOUT YOU TWO, WOULD YOU LIKE TO GO?
IT SEEMS THEY HAVE FAINTED!

"Well, my dear, after WRACKing my BRAIN for HOURS to sort of think UP some NEW way to keep ARab and NOIsy DANGling in susPENDers about this HOUSE party at the McTAVish's, I decided it would be awfully sort of CRUel to TORture them any LONGer about it, because, my dear, they have BOTH of them lost POUNDS as a result of the MENtal ANguish to which they have been SUBjugated on account of not being ASKED and thinking I was going to invite two OTHer boys instead of THEM—can you BEAR it, my dear? Well, ANYways, the reason I sort of deCIDed not to keep ON torturing them about it was because I suddenly discovered that Grace BRETton had asked these two AWfully sweet boys that I had finally decided I would ask, so I decided I would have to ask ARab and NOIsy after ALL, because there was nobody ELSE—can you BEAR it, my dear? But I mean I was all hot and BOTHered about it because I HONestly hadn't the VAguest susPIcion of how STRONGly these odd souls FELT about the matter until I sort of CASually issued the inviTAtion, at which point I was PRACtically ready to ROLL over and BUTter myself with disMAY because, my dear they BOTH relaxed QUIetly into unCONsciousness from the SHOCK!"

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

Madge and Mary Tremble at Philip Veritzen's Return

IF I had not been so confused by receiving Philip Veritzen's flamboyant wireless message and summons to his office while Dicky was standing near me, I never would have given my husband the opportunity for the bitter jabbing retort which he made to my announcement that I would not go to Mr. Veritzen's office on Sunday, but would wait until Tuesday because I did not want to upset Dicky's first week-end at home.

"According to our agreement, that is hardly in your power, is it?" he said so quietly that for an instant I did not get the full significance of the remark.

"I beg your pardon," I said, with equal quietude. "I am afraid I worded my sentence unfortunately. What I really meant was that I did not wish to upset Junior, who wishes us both to be with him, and for whose sake alone our agreement was made."

We were both breathing a bit quickly as we faced each other. I heard Mother Graham's door close and knew that she and Mary had withdrawn from what might prove to be a battlefield.

"Does it lie within my province to point out to you that from all standpoints I think you are making a mistake?" he said. "This man is your employer, remember that. You receive a large salary from him for just the knowledge which he wishes to utilize as soon as he lands. Perhaps you do not realize his reputation as a martinet. It is entirely within his rights—I read your contract, remember—to discharge you summarily if you fail to appear at the time he has specified, and if he imagines that anything save death or serious illness has kept you away, he is extremely likely to exercise his rights."

I had sense enough to realize that he was making a tremendous effort to be fair and to point out to me something which it was needful for me to remember. But secretly I did not agree with his opinion that Philip Veritzen needed to utilize my opinions as soon as he landed. Very vividly to me came the memory of the great producer's farewell talk with me in his office just before he sailed when after giving directions for my finishing of his work, and my subsequent taking of a vacation, he had held my hands tightly in his and said fervently: "I shall count the days until I return." He then had bent and kissed my hands with an exaggeratedly tender gesture. I had known, of course, that the whole thing was the theatrical sort of farewell which he staged with his favored friends, but there had been something in his eyes which had disturbed me. The remembrance of that look impelled my vanity to the belief that if I had been a man or an elderly woman, he would have been content to let the conference go until he had been a day or two in the city.

It was a remembrance which made me suddenly reluctant to go to the producers' offices on a Sunday morning, when they would be deserted. But not to Dicky under the present circumstances could I voice this objection. But I put a pertinent question.

"Then I am to understand that you will—advise me to go."

I could have bitten my tongue through—for its slip in almost phrasing the word "wish" which I quickly had changed to "advise," but not swiftly enough to elude Dicky's acute hearing.

"Under the circumstances I have no wish in the matter," he said, and his voice was like the tinkle of sleet against a window pane. "My advice most certainly is to do as your employer directs if you value your job."

It took every bit of pride and will power to keep my voice steady and my eyes from blazing as I answered.

"Thank you," I said steadily. "I think you are right. I shall go. If you'll excuse me, I'll send my answer now."

He bowed stiffly and taking Junior's hand went to his mother's door and rapped. I turned to the telephone, but it was two or three minutes before I could get the telegraph station. Before I succeeded, Mary Harrison had come out of her grandmother's room, and I put out my hand with a detaining gesture. She waited while I telephoned my message to Mr. Veritzen that I would be at his offices at 11 o'clock Sunday, and I heard her quick intake of the breath as I pronounced the great producer's name. When I turned from the telephone, she looked at me with a piteous pretense of courage.

"Well, I suppose that's the end of me," she said.

"Together" Problem

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"TOGETHER!" There is a charm in the very word!

A certain amount of solitude is good for everyone. But we dread loneliness, which is a feeling of being left out, unloved. A large proportion of marriages are doubtless inspired by horror of loneliness.

It is a perfectly normal instinct to wish to have someone who cares, with whom to talk things over, to share joys and sorrows, someone to work for, someone to play with, someone to take one out of self and brooding over self, someone to love.

Solitary confinement, it is said, will in time make an idiot or a beast of the average being. Nature insists on somebody else.

"It's not that I need anyone to look after me," a friend explained the other day, in giving his reasons for marrying again after the loss of a loved wife. "I can look after myself. But it's companionship I long for. No one knows how I long for the companionship of someone who understands and cares just a little."

What inspires the modern girl to wish for happy marriage just as tensely as did her Victorian grandmother? Need of a protector? Hardly. Modern girls are well able to look after themselves. Does she marry to be supported? Not in these days of independent women wage-earners.

Girls are not forced to marry for the sake of kisses and caresses, since petters are so plentiful. What the modern girl wants of marriage is, primarily, congenial, affectionate companionship; the knowledge that there is someone in the world who is her loyal friend and life partner, someone to plan with, be happy with, grow old with or, better still, stay young with. It is the "together" thought that lures modern men and women into marriage and founding a home.

Those who have been in some way spoiled by life have a tendency to draw away, mentally, from their fellows. Fear or hatred, indifference or a sense of superiority may be the motive for this pulling away.

"No one understands me," lonely girls write. "I am different." There is dissatisfied criticism of others in this point of view, rather than an unselfish reaching out for companionship. This critical thought would condemn the rose for its thorns. It repels others and leads to unpopularity and defeat.

I know a girl who is much alone. But is she lonely? Far from it. Each day brings a love-letter from the man she is to wed—the man she respects and loves with all her heart. She is happy every moment because, although the two are separated for the time their thoughts are together in mutual desire to make each other happy.

Everyone wonders why Sally is so popular and loved. The reason is simple. Sally is not the handsomest girl in the neighborhood, nor the best-dressed. But she is immensely interested in all the girls and young men she knows. She gives little parties for them in her mother's apartment, when all go out into the kitchenette and make up impromptu spreads. She doesn't just pretend to like folks—she really likes them and throws herself whole-heartedly into the good times and welfare of her crowd. They feel this genuine affection and are attracted as by the warmth of sunshine. No wonder there is always a group of young men at every party, clamoring for a dance with Sally. No wonder the finest young man of all is saving every penny for the cottage he hopes he may buy for Sally when he wins that "Yes" for which he longs.

The "together" thought reaches its height of happiness and good through love, marriage and home. When babies come, the thought deepens and broadens, until finally home reaches out its arms in good will and service toward the entire community and world.

There is a serious "together" problem. Living happily in marriage is not easy. There is a price to be paid. You have to make a bargain. The price of happy marriage is concessions.

After all, is the price of successful marriage too great? Kindness is not a strain for a lady or gentleman. There is keen pleasure in making a loved one very happy.

Mutual concessions will lift your marriage to a higher grade of "togetherness" and multiply all your joys by two.

If you hope for successful romance, cultivate "together" thoughts toward your family, friends—the entire world. Express your real interest, liking and good will in words and actions.

Then when you have won the man, proceed to study your "together" problem as his wife. Its solution will not be easy, for it involves work, clever thinking and self-sacrifice. But when you and he learn the secret of living together harmoniously and successfully as man and wife you will experience the deepest, best happiness life can offer—the joy and peace of love, marriage and home.

Horoscopes

Sunday, September 18

THIS is read as rather an unfavorable day in the government of the stars. Astrologers find that malefic aspects dominate.

There is fair promise for all who are on the water, either coming from Europe, or crossing for a holiday.

While this configuration prevails the mind may be open to good suggestions and for this reason the clergy should benefit.

Much discussion of religion and philosophy is forecast for the winter when there may be determined opposition to teachers from India.

There is a direction of the stars today that encourages severe introspection and consequent discontent.

Domestic relations may be easily disturbed under this planetary rule and certainly harmony between persons who are married is menaced.

Great increase in the cost of living is to be noted before this time next year, if the seers are to be believed.

Astrologers foretell new complications between the United States and Mexico, since Neptune will be near the Nadir in threatening aspect to Saturn.

Danger of international disputes and military gestures is foreseen for this country.

New and startling religious movements are foretold and they will be accepted quickly in western states, it is forecast.

Texas is to come under a planetary influence that will cause troubles of various sorts, the seers prognosticate.

Vagaries in weather again are indicated by the stars, which presage a winter of suffering in large cities.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a year of change. Both men and women are likely to become interested in public affairs.

Children born on this day have the augury of success in life through their talents, but difficulty in attaining the greatest heights may be experienced.

Monday, September 19

WHILE a benefic aspect dominates today, according to astrology, it is time to be careful in all business dealings.

Women should benefit today, for opportunities will open to them along new lines of activity, the seers prophesy.

In the coming year exalted love will conquer many obstacles and will be a redeeming influence, if the stars are rightly read.

This should be a rarely happy wedding day, for fate is likely to make the husband and wife strongly dependent on each other.

It is wise to be tactful in dealing with employes under this sway, which makes for restlessness and independence.

Many aged persons may suffer under this rule of the stars, which hastens many into another state of being. Many celebrities will die.

The Moon today is in a sign making for backsliding in contracts and ignoring of important engagements.

A London astrologer prophesies a new misunderstanding between this country and France.

American oil interests in foreign lands again comes under a direction of the stars that makes for trouble.

Iron and steel industries have the most fortunate forecast which seems to indicate much demand from foreign nations.

The birthrate for next year is to be much greater than it has been in the past, for motherhood is to become a fashionable ambition.

Many marriages and divorces will mark the social calendars of all the states, but there will be fewer sensational scandals, it is foretold.

Persons whose birthdate it is should take special pains to keep up with all domestic activities, especially those that concern the young.

Children born on this day probably will be fond of the simple things of life and great homelovers.

BEAUTY QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Darkening Lashes.

DEAR MISS LEEDS—I have a heavy head of ashen blonde hair, but my lashes are very light and thin. Please tell me how to make them heavier and darker.

A. L. R.

Answer—Brush the lashes with vaseline every day. This will gradually darken the hairs and promote their growth. Sometimes when the eyes are weak and suffering from strain, the lashes are scanty. Eye lashes grow slowly, so that you should not expect results from the treatment before six months or so.

LOIS LEEDS.

Superfluous Hair and Blackheads.

Dear Miss Leeds—(1) Can you advise me of an especially good formula to be used in removing superfluous hair from the face? (2) Is cold cream massaged into the skin good for ridding the face of blackheads?

WONDERING.

Answer—(1) Do not use depilatories on the face unless you wish to promote the growth of the hairs. If you have only a few objectionable hairs, have them permanently removed by electrolysis. If there is an extensive growth of unwanted hairs, you may bleach them so that they will become inconspicuous or have them permanently removed by the ray method. Every one has a light down of fine hair on the face and it is best to leave it alone unless it grows long and dark. If you decide to use a depilatory, however, I think the cream form is the most satisfactory for the purpose. (2) No. You may use the cold cream to remove your make-up at bedtime, then wash your face with soap and water and press out the blackheads. My leaflet on "Complexion Ills" describes helpful treatments for this blemish and I shall be glad to mail you a copy if you send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

LOIS LEEDS.

Developing the Chest.

Dear Miss Leeds—I am a blonde, 20 years old and am considered good looking. I am 5 feet 5 inches tall and weigh 120 pounds. My hips measure 36 inches and my bust 32½ inches. My friends say I look terribly flat-chested. Please tell me how to develop my bust three or four inches. Please answer immediately, as I shall be watching for your reply.

RITA.

Answer—You need to gain about seven pounds. You are a fairly tall girl and should have at least 34 bust to be in good proportion. Cultivate an erect posture, with chest out and chin level. Any arm flinging exercises will help you. Swimming the breast and back strokes would be especially helpful if you do not overexert yourself. Outdoor sports like golf and tennis that call for arm action would also help you. Please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for my leaflets — on "Beauty Exercises," which gives special exercises for the bust, and "Feminine Proportions and Dress," that gives the physical specifications of a number of well-known beauties. I am sorry that it is impossible for me to answer any reader "immediately," since there are so many who wish their questions answered. I am able to send answers by mail quicker than I can publish them here, so that if you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your questions next time you may expect my replies sooner.

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

"A Decent Girl"

DEAR MISS GALE:

This is my first letter to you, but I never miss reading your wonderful advice. Just a few lines to "A Decent Fellow." I sure would like to meet you. Nearly all the fellows I meet like to kiss and pet, etc., but I do not indulge in such pastimes. I am nearly 17, considered good looking by both sexes. I do not pet, drink nor smoke. So now "Decent Fellow," tell me what you think of me. Also you, Miss Gale. One evening I went out on a blind date. Now the girl I went out with lets every Tom, Dick and Harry kiss her. I always tell her she will be sorry, but still she keeps it up. We went to a show, then danced, the next way home the fellow I was with tried to kiss me. I told him I did not let any fellow kiss me. He laughed at me and tried to take it against me will so I scratched him. Do you think I should have defended myself that way? My girl friend was in the front and had many kisses, but I didn't think I was missing much. We took the other girl and fellow home first and this left me alone with this fellow. We didn't say a word to each other all the way home, but when we reached the door he asked me when he could see me again. I told him never, because I wouldn't go out with petters. He said he didn't like girls who pet, but he said he didn't know I was a decent girl. He said he was sorry it happened and it would never happen again. I told him to call me up when he did the very next day. I gave him a date and he acted like a gentleman. Please tell me what you think of me Miss Gale, and say I write as much as I like. I wish you loads of luck. I remain,

"A DECENT GIRL."

Which just goes to show that boys really have more liking and respect for the girl who refuses to pet.

Unhappy

DEAR MISS GALE:

I wrote ages ago to you, but unfortunately wrote on both sides of the paper, so I am coming again to ask you for your wonderful advice.

I am in love with a boy, Miss Gale, four years my senior. I thought he loved me, but he does not seem to any more. I want him, Miss Gale. How can I get him? I agree absolutely with you on the petting, drinking and smoking questions and don't see how anyone can indulge in them. Boys may like to, but I don't think they would want a girl of that kind for a wife, do you? The boy I love does it, but has never tried it on me. If he ever does I never shall let him. Is this correct? How can I find out if he loves me, Miss Gale? I never can forget him. I'm always thinking of him, Miss Gale, always. Don't say I am a foolish child, etc., for I don't think I am. I am considered pretty. I have a large nose, which I hate, and am very self-conscious. Can I get over that?

Please help me, Miss Gale, for this I am quite sure, is truly true love. How can I find out whether he loves me or not? Shall I act very glad to see him, when I do, or otherwise? I think he knows I like him, therefore he probably says that I'll never get him, for he is very conceited. But no matter—I love him.

UNHAPPY.

But, my dear, if this boy knows you and still is not interested, how can you expect to make him like you? Liking is never forced, you know. Perhaps you have disgusted him a little with your obvious fondness for him, and indifference might work like a charm. You might try it, anyway. Everyone has some defect of appearance, you know, so just be glad yours is a large nose instead of something worse.

"A Decent Girl"

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a constant reader of your column, and most compliment you indeed as to the advice you give. I must say a few words to "A Decent Fellow." You sure are my ideal, and must say there are few like you around nowadays. When I read your letter I was glad to know there was one that I should like to know, as I had given up hopes of meeting one of your type. As I am past 21, good looking and popular as well as having a good clean name, I can have a wonderful time without indulging in smoking or drinking. I certainly agree with you, "Decent Fellow," that you are entitled to a respectable girl for your wife, as I expect to be a respectable girl for someone also of the same type as you.

Wishing you good luck, "A Decent Fellow," and thank you, Miss Gale, for your space, I remain,

"A DECENT GIRL."

MARRIAGE RHYMES FOR MONTHS.

Married in January's hour and rime,
Widowed you'll be before your prime.
Married in February's sleety weather,
Life you'll tread in time together.
Married when March winds chill and roar,
Your home will lie on a foreign shore.
Married 'neath April's changeful skies,
A checkered path before you lies.
Married when those we love blooms fit,
Strangers around your board will sit.
Married in month of roses—June—
Life will be one honeymoon.
Married in July, with flowers shining,
Bitter sweet memories in after days.
Married in August's heat and drouth,
Lover and friend in your chosen rouse.
Married in golden September's blow,
Smooth and serene your life will flow.
Married when leaves in October thin,
Toil and hardship for you begin.
Married in vein of November mist,
Dame Fortune your wedding ring has kissed.
While those who partake of December's cheer,
For them life grows brighter from year to year.

GIRL QUITS NEAR CHANNEL GOAL

BOULOGNE, France, Sept. 17.—(AP)—The South African girl, Millie Hudson, made a game effort to beat the Channel in her swim of yesterday, but was forced to quit by the cold waters only three miles from Dover after being in the water about 12 hours. She started from Cape Gris Nez at 11:06 o'clock yesterday morning, and was taken out shortly after midnight.

Soon after the start strong currents from the west swept her out of the course in the direction of Calais. It is estimated that altogether she must have covered about 24 miles.

ELEVATOR FALLS FIVE FLOORS, 2 WOMEN FAINT

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 17.—An elevator in the Hall of Justice fell five floors, the operator checking it at the second floor.

What is Anne Caldwell doing with John Hubbard, the "Shovel King's" $50,000? Is she spending it on champagne? The answer will be in the Magazine Section of Sunday's Sun-Telegraph.

PLANES GATHER FOR SPOKANE AIR DERBY

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(AP.)—Seeking flying fame and share of the $47,500 offered in prizes, 11 airplanes were at Roosevelt Field for the start of the Spokane air derby across the continent next Monday and Tuesday.

The planes represented less than one-fifth of the 37 entrants listed for the races, which comprise a non-stop flight, one with a single halt and two with overnight stops.

Two of the planes on the field were entered in the Class A event. They are piloted by E. G. Lee of Maywood, Ill., and Nicholas Mamer. Neither had announced who would accompany them as passenger. Planes in this classification are to take off at 5:30 a. m. Tuesday and make an overnight stop at St. Paul. Each is to carry a pilot and two passengers. A prize of $16,000 has been offered for the winner of this event, with $5,000 for second place, $2,000 for third and $1,000 for fourth.

The other arrivals were to compete in the Class B race, scheduled to start Monday at 5:30 a. m., and stop over night at Chicago and Glendive, Mont. The prizes for this race are $5,000, $2,000, $1,000 and $500. Each is to carry one passenger. Crews of planes on the ground entered in this class were J. G. Smith, pilot, and J. R. Storey, passenger, Tacoma, Wash.; Jack Ashcroft, pilot, and Burt Crader, passenger, Towanda, Pa.; R. Johnson, pilot, Missoula, Mont. passenger unannounced; Eddie Burgin, pilot, Garden City, L. I., passenger unannounced; A. L. O'Donnell, pilot, and Mrs. A. L. O'Donnell, passenger, Whittier, Cal.; Clair McMahon, pilot, Miles City, Mont., passenger unannounced; Eugene Dettmer, pilot, Tarrytown, N. Y., passenger unannounced; Jack Asher, pilot, passenger unannounced.

None of the seven planes which officials said were entered in the non-stop event has arrived. The latest entrant is the Stinson-Detroiter, monoplane Royal Windsor, which "Duke" Schiller and Phil Wood, recently withdrew from an attempt to cross the Atlantic. Two prizes have been offered for this race, $10,000 for the winner and $5,000 for second place.

MISSIONARIES RETURNING DUE TO CHINA'S TURMOIL

PRANKLIN, Pa., Sept. 17.—(Special.)—Because of the unsettled conditions in China, Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Cunningham, medical missionaries there, have sailed for home, according to advice to Mrs. A. H. McDowell, a relative of this place.

SHERIFF'S NOTICE. DELINQUENT SCHOOL TAX LIENS.

School District of the City of Pittsburgh, and the Board of Public Education of the School District of Pittsburgh.

Pursuant to Acts of General Assembly of the State of Pennsylvania, providing when, how, upon what property and to what extent liens shall be allowed for taxes and municipal improvements, etc., approved May 16th, 1923, P. L. 207, writs of scire facias having been issued out of the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County, at the instance of the City of Pittsburgh, in the following cases of Delinquent Tax Liens, requiring the defendants named therein to file affidavits of defense, or in default, judgment to be entered, Now, notice is hereby given to the defendants hereinafter named that unless affidavits of defense be filed to said claims in the Prothonotary's office of Allegheny County within fifteen (15) days after October 1st, 1927, judgment may be entered and the property described in the liens sold to recover the amounts of the said claim,

ARRESTS BEGUN IN ALABAMA FLOGGINGS

By Universal Service.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 17.—With eighteen indictments returned by the Jefferson county grand jury in connection with the series of floggings in this district, arrests on the true bills have begun here.

W. J. Worthington, former Klan exalted cyclops, was the first arrested, on charges of bribery and kidnaping. He will be tried charged with attempting to induce a grand jury witness to assume the blame in connection with the flogging of Arthur Hitt, Negro farmer. Worthington made $30,000 bond to await trial.

Charles J. Seale was being held in default of $25,000 bond in connection with the lashing of John L. Belton of Tarrant City.

Louis C. Albright, Worthington's attorney, was also arrested and held in heavy bail on charges of bribery. Julius Lumpkin, charged with bribery, and Albright also figure in the charges in connection with the Hitt flogging case.

L. D. Elwell was sentenced to jail for five days when he refused to give evidence pertaining to floggings.

"Flogging days are going to end in Alabama," declared Attorney General Charles McCall as he turned his attention to the prosecution of the eighteen men under indictment.

BANKS APPEAL TO SARGENT

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Official steps have been taken at the Treasury to have Attorney General Sargent rule on the power of the Federal Reserve Board to dictate rediscount rates for any of the reserve system's 12 member banks.

If Sargent upholds the board's authority to force rate changes, the way will be opened for a court test, or an attempted revamping of the Federal reserve act, by banking and political forces which have attacked the board's reduction of the Chicago bank rate.

Frank O. Wetmore, Chicago's representative on the Federal advisory council, announced that the Chicago bank had sought the opinion.

TO TEST SANITY OF AX KILLER

A sanity commission was appointed by Judge James R. Macfarlane in Criminal Court to pass on the mentality of August Schmidtpeter, alleged ax murderer, awaiting trial. Schmidtpeter is accused of having struck Charlotte Stumph, 64, with an ax at the rear of her home, 1427 Howard street, North Side, May 27. she died the following day. Drs. Edward Mayer and Robert J. Campbell, experts in mental diseases, were named members of the commission. A petition presented the court by Jail Physician C. J. Ellis declared Schmidtpeter had been acting strangely.

ROBBED, BEATEN UNCONSCIOUS

Victim of a gang of Negro thugs, Mike Zermira, 28, 1228 Forbes street, was found this morning at Fifth and Sixth avenues, unconscious. On recovering in the Allegheny General Hospital, where he was taken by police, Zermira said that four thugs attacked him and robbed him of $45. As they fled they knocked him unconscious.

Dr. S. H. Kennedy, who treated Zermira, said that his condition was not serious and that he had been drinking.

DOGS BITE GIRL AND BOY

George Punch, 3, of 2513 Fifth avenue, was bitten by a dog and narrowly escaped being crushed by an automobile after the dog had knocked him over near his home. The dog bit the boy on the lip and forehead. He was treated at the Homeopathic Hospital.

Loraine Kline, 3, of 7311½ Ferdinand way, was bitten on the right forearm by a neighbor's dog while playing near his home yesterday

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Confess, Colonel!

GEORGE BUNGLE, IS THAT GIBYL DARDANELLA I SEE WORKING IN THIS OFFICE?
GEORGE WHY DO YOU TOSS AND TURN SO MUCH? YOU HAVE SOMETHING ON YOUR MIND HAVEN'T YOU?
ABSOLUTELY NOT! THE REASON I CAN'T GET TO SLEEP IS BECAUSE MY SUPPER DIDN'T AGREE WITH ME. PORK CHOPS ARE HARD ON MY DIGESTION. I KNEW WHEN I TOOK THE FOURTH ONE THAT I —
WE HAD STEAK FOR SUPPER! ALL EVENING YOU MUMBLED TO YOURSELF AND LOOKED AT THE CEILING EVERY TIME I CAUGHT YOUR EYE.
OH ANY BUSINESSMAN HAS THINGS — SMALL THINGS — ON HIS MIND. THEY DON'T AMOUNT TO MUCH BUT IT MAKES HIM FEEL GOOD TO. WELL — IN A WAY — WORRY ABOUT THEM.
DON'T TELL ME GEORGE BUNGLE. YOU'RE WORRIED AND IT'S ABOUT SOMETHING IMPORTANT, I KNOW!
HA! HA! HA! WELL THAT'S GOOD. ME WORRIED? MY WORD WHAT A THOUGHT.
ALL RIGHT, GEORGE BUNGLE. I CAN SEE THAT YOU'RE DETERMINED NOT TO TELL ME THE TRUTH. HOW SILLY YOU ARE TO EVEN IMAGINE YOU CAN PULL THE WOOL OVER THE EYES OF A WOMAN WHO'S SPENT 20 YEARS IN SHOWING YOU IT CAN'T BE DONE.

THE CUTEST THING BABY EVER SAID

My man-child, Jerrold, age 7, heard his father complaining Sunday because he had been unable to secure service at his country club on account of the demands of new members, and asserting that he had been an habitue of that club for some years and deserved some privileges. Later in the afternoon Jerrold and I encountered our pastor, who said to Jerrold:

"And who is this little man?"

"I'm a son of a habitue," Jerrold replied.

Sunshine Girl Puts Up Brave Front But Sniffles Reveal Woe; Review of "Maurine."

Maurine, gargling the bitter cup of pain, prepared for the wedding—the wedding that was to snatch Vivian Dangerfield from her trembling grasp and hurl him into the arms of Helen Trevor, or Trevor.

"There was a week of bustle and of hurry;
Calling, replying; and to tripping feet
Of busy bridesmaids, running to and fro
With all that girlish fluttering and flurry
Preceding such occasions
Helen's room
Was like a lily garden, all in bloom.
Decked with the dainty robes of her trousseau.
My robe (Maurine speaking) was fashioned by swift, skillful hands—
A thing of beauty, elegant and rich,
A mystery of loopings, puffs and bands—

But Maurine, despite her ever-ready smile looked ghastly. Horror gripped her heart, and even while she skipped around the house tossing flowers here and there, bowing and doing little dance steps tears trickled down her cheeks and she choked and moaned every time she found herself alone behind a lace curtain.

THIS WAGGISH WORLD by Roy K. Moulton

OLD DOC SERGE VORONOFF, the gland peddler who has rejuvenated many old gentlemen (for a few months) by installing monkey glands, plans now to produce a race of super-men by the same means. If there is any man who desires to be a super, now is his chance. After the Old Doc has worked on the problem long enough, we will be a race of Mussolinis, Napoleons, Alexanders the Great and Bernard Shaws. Heavens! What a prospect! The human race will certainly be hard to live with.

WITH every man and woman a genius and nobody left to do the work, the world will reach an impasse. Well, maybe, it is time the world reached something. It has been on its way for considerable time. With every man a mental giant, we will, of course, be obliged to cancel most of our legislative and diplomatic machinery and get along without statesmen.

But the Old Doc has performed wonders with a lot of old gentlemen who wished for some obscure reason to be young again. After the installation of the monkey glands the old gents began making monkeys of themselves. They began hitting the primrose trail, and for the first time padlocks [illegible]ight clubs became necessary.

Many an old gent, who had been able to do nothing but shuffle along with both feet on the floor, could jump right over a cigar box. A man 80 years old could have a gland installed and three months afterward he wouldn't look a day over 97.

HOWEVER, Dr. Voronoff has made certain improvements and when he makes a gland old man in future the treatment will stick. The glands will be so administered that they will best meet the needs of the patients, somewhat, we imagine, as follows:

Giraffe Glands: Will be installed in men who attend modern "prize fights" and can afford nothing better than the $37.50 "ringside" seats. Such a ringside seat at Soldiers' Field, Chicago, is located just between Evanston and Rogers Park. But a race of men with long necks might be able to see the faint aura of lights above the ring.

Gorilla Glands: Especially fitted for subway passengers. The arms will be seven inches longer than at present and will make strap-hanging a pleasure. The elbows will be especially powerful and guaranteed to fracture a neighbor's ribs with one push.

Goat Glands: These will be found to be especially suitable to ultimate consumers and white-collar men. They will enable these citizens, who are entirely without legislative or union protection, to subsist on a diet of tin cans and billboard posters.

Rattlesnake Glands: For "office politicians," busybodies, scandal mongers, gossips, shyster lawyers and snoops.

Shark Glands: For ticket-scalpers, blue-sky stock salesmen, racketeers, chattel mortgage experts and poison booze manufacturers.

Sheep Glands: For the average run of obedient and much herded citizen who is hedged about by shalt-nots, don'ts and verbotens.

There is no reason why every man's needs should not be satisfied, but it is going to be kind of tough on the animals. A lot of perfectly good, sensible monkeys have been ruined that way.

Depriving an industrious monkey of a good job on a hand organ to make a Roman holiday for some septuagenarian who should be sitting by the fire and behaving himself is not what we would call a triumph of science.

The most pathetic old age is one that tries to ape youth.

ON "THE ETERNAL RIDDLE."

When a MAN asks
A GIRL how much she LOVES him, and
She says, "A LITTLE;" he Is not SATISFIED.
He wants her to Go on LOVING him
More and more,
Yet later, if
This HAPPENS, and she Never has a thought for ANYONE ELSE, he begins to Think this is TOO MUCH
Of a good thing. And Wants a LITTLE LESS.
If a girl asks
A man how much he LOVES her, and he says,
"Enough!" she is not SATISFIED either,
For if she LOVES him
She says, "A LITTLE!" he Such WORD in the Language of LOVE.
But if she does NOT
LOVE him, then,
Even "enough" may be Far too much.
LOVE, it seems, is a
RIDDLE and there are many Different ANSWERS
To the same old QUESTION.

Here Is a Powerful Face

You Can't Wave It Away with a Checkbook.

This man, said by many to be the most powerful man in Russia since the death of Lenin, is seen here seated on a small wooden bench at the Second Economical Congress. The Congress is held in the old Imperial Palace of Moscow, where the Czars once had their way, held the power that Bolshevism holds now, and sometimes carried on campaigns of murder that would make the Bolshevik efforts seem feeble.

In this column below the powerful face of the Bolshevik leader, Rykov, you see the last of the line of Czars, whom Bolshevism swept into the discard, as coldly and as cruelly as those same Czars had swept aside into the grave thousands of men and women by way of cold Siberia.

RYKOV, A POWERFUL RUSSIAN.

When you look at Rykov's face and the feeble face of this last Czar, you do not wonder that czars are gone, or that men like Lenin, Rykov, Trotzky have taken their places.

This face of Rykov shows powerful thought and dreadful earnestness.

Our high financiers ought to look at it and think a little about it.

THE FEEBLE "LAST OF THE CZARS."

It looks very much as though he and his associates were in Russia TO STAY.

The wise thing for the United States would be to recognize the government that has lasted for years, allowing the Russians to manage their country as they choose while we manage our country as we choose.

We complain bitterly of their propaganda. But they do not talk, write, and legislate in favor of their Communism any more earnestly than we talk, write and legislate in favor of our capitalism.

And we have this advantage; that capitalism will last, because it is in human nature to be selfish, whereas Communism will not last as a permanent government, because it opposes the strongest emotion in human beings, THE DESIRE OF OWNERSHIP.

Russia, a nation that produces thousands of men like this man, is not to be ruled by outside countries that happen not to approve her theories.

A government will be changed FROM WITHIN, and not FROM WITHOUT.

Prosperity will come, wealth will accumulate. The most clever, cunning minds will rise to the top and rule.

What happened in France and in other countries that had their hour of revolutionary excitement will happen in Russia.

Money and prosperity and selfish intelligence will rule there as elsewhere. That is how the world is wound up, at least for the next few centuries.

Garrett P Serviss Says:

Newton and Laplace

THIS year, 1927, has seen the two hundredth anniversary of the death of Sir Isaac Newton, and the one hundredth of the death of the Marquis de Laplace, the two men who did more than any others to establish astronomy as the most exact and grandest of the sciences. Newton was the founder of "celestial mechanics." Laplace, in the words of Emile Picard, of the French Academy of Sciences, was "the most illustrious continuator of his (Newton's) work."

It is a commonplace to say that the names of these men are worthy of higher honor than those of the greatest conquerors, but how many feel the full truth of that statement? Newton and Laplace conquered the universe for the human mind. There is no exaggeration in the Latin inscription on Newton's tomb in Westminster Abbey, which says that mortals have reason to congratulate themselves that the human race could bring forth so great an ornament. And a remark of Fourier referring to the crowning achievement of Laplace is no less just: "Even Newton did not know all the perfections of the universe."

As an indication of how Laplace supplemented Newton and, in perfecting, sometimes re-formed his work we may take the question of the stability of the solar system. Newton, as M. Picard puts it, "saw in the admirable arrangement of the sun and the planets the work of an intelligent and all-powerful being, but he thought that, in consequence of the perturbations produced by the mutual action of these bodies, this arrangement could not be indefinitely maintained, and he believed that the solar system would have need, some day, to be rearranged by its author."

This was disturbing, and Laplace took up the problem and was able to show, half a century after Newton's death, that only the details and not the general arrangement of the members of the solar system are altered by their mutual perturbations, whence the permanence of the system may be regarded as highly probable, if not absolutely certain. This view, as enforced by later investigations, prevails today.

In one respect Newton and Laplace were rather wide apart. Newton was profoundly religious. Laplace was a skeptic. Yet both were in complete accord concerning the littleness of human knowledge. On his death-bed Laplace furnished a companion piece to Newton's famous declaration that he seemed to himself in his researches, to be nothing but "a child playing on the seashore with a handful of pebbles." Laplace's word (his last) was "What we know is of a small account, what we are ignorant of is immense!"

Plan Vacation

WHY make your automobile trip in such haste and at such speed that you fail to appreciate the beauties of the country?

Why drive so fast that you are keyed to the highest nervous tension?

What good does your family derive from a trip if you drive so far each day that they are too tired and weary all the time to get any enjoyment out of their travel?

In your efforts to make time and keep to a fixed schedule, you probably unnerve the members of your family.

You are all thoroughly unhappy.

In planning a vacation trip you would do well to decide upon a schedule that does not necessitate a long drive every day.

Delays are quite frequent and it takes extra effort to make up for them.

You are taking the trip because you need rest and recreation.

Study the country, breathe in the fresh air, compare the beauties of one section with another, so that you will know the difference when you get home. Rest often between drives, and benefit by the travel.

EVER SINCE the day
WHEN I first began
TO BUY tooth paste
IN METAL tubes
I'VE BEEN engaged
IN CONSTANT quarrels
AS TO who it is
WHO LOSES the cap
FROM OFF the tube
AND SO it was
THAT A year ago
I MADE up my mind
THAT EVERY cap
THAT HADN'T been lost
BEFORE THE tube
WAS HALF squeezed out
I'D TAKE it off
AND HIDE it somewhere
AND IN that way
I'D ACCUMULATE
A COLLECTION of caps
AND FINALLY
THE CRAZE for caps
OF TOOTH paste tubes
BECAME SO strong
I BEGAN to steal them
AND I'M going to use them
TO REPLACE the caps
THAT THE children lose
AND IN that way
IN ABOUT 10 years
BY SAVING and stealing
AND CONSTANT preaching
THEY MAY get so
IT WILL bother them
WHEN THE cap is gone
AND THEY'LL get in the habit
OF SCREWING it back
AND IF I succeed
IT IS then my intention
WITH THE money I've saved
IN PREVENTING the tooth paste
FROM OOZING out
WHEN IT isn't in use
TO OFFER a prize
FOR SOME sort of a chain
THAT WON'T all the time
KEEP COMING loose
FROM THE bathroom plug
THESE ARE simple things
AND UNIMPORTANT
EXCEPT THAT sometimes
THEY LEAD to a grouch

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 17.—Now that Will Rogers is no longer active Mayor I am visiting Bill Hogg in Beverly Hills. Rogers writes for the same syndicate peddling my piffle in New York and there is a good deal of jealousy—at least on his part.

I wasn't going to take chances on a small town mayor making me the target for observation of a lot of fool laws. A good many years ago I gave up visiting private homes on account of those slick towels for guests in the bathroom, but I decided to take one more chance and see how it pans out.

From the window one can see Tom Mix's trick block long bathing pool which can be emptied instantly in case of gay midnight gate crashers from Hollywood. There is also a view of Buster Keaton's light green palace with a toiling flight of fancy steps. If his Dad had ever thrown him down them in old vaudeville days there would be no Buster.

They are the sort somehow that make you expect a statuesque "Miss Liberty" and the girls representing different states to walk down slowly in costume as they do in musical shows. Nearly all homes here are "show place" affairs with winding roads, terraced lawns and back-yard bathing pools.

While the Spanish influence in architecture is pronounced, California has evolved its own—a combination of many blending strikingly. Homes are gay with striped awnings and usually built around a palm-fronted patio with a centered rising and falling fountain.

There is the general effect of a Belasco setting. It might be added the most popular citizen in Beverly by odds is the rope-throwing, gum-chewing humorist, Will Rogers. Beverly, a town of 10,000, is about 20 minutes by motor from Los Angeles, while Hollywood is at the city's door.

In the evening the tired Los Angeles business man does not occupy seat A1 at the Follies. He sprinkles his lawn and is in bed at 9 o'clock. Many bungalows are combination homes and business establishments—selling gowns, hats, books, stationery and, of course, real estate.

"Old Doc Crane"—his own appellation—was a pleasant caller today. He is known to millions as Dr. Frank Crane, for his pleasant philosophy. He has located permanently out here and has a study that is the admiration of all writers. Inside it suggests Grand Central. He combines the qualities of a devout religionist with good fellowship. In his New York apartment he used to hold a weekly poker game. The players were a hard-boiled group of newspapermen and cartoonists who were gambling recklessly and drinking too much. In a wholesome atmosphere no one was allowed to win more than a nickel, and lemonade was the libation. And they had so much fun the good doctor broke up a high-running poker game.

Today I met Al St. John, the cinema comique, and afterward some one told me his name was pronounced Sinjun. But later I met a Mr. Abercrombie and called him Mr. Crumb he didn't seem to care for it.

Hamburger and chili stands are in profusion along the motor roadways. They too bear rugged pioneering names such as Dutch's, Ike's, The Champ Inn, Red Oscar's, Ptomaine Pete's, Tim the Hermit's and Coyote Jake's. California is extremely democratic in mounting stools at luncheon places and carrying trays in the best cafeterias the world has ever produced. You slide your cafeteria tray around on a rail and view the most tempting display of dishes in the world.

Traffic is regulated simply and efficiently by automatic signals. There are few traffic policemen outside of the congested midtown districts. Bells ring and Stop and Go signs drop. Nobody disregards them as severe is the penalty when caught.

Democracy

By DR. FRANK CRANE

With almost every practical argument in the world against it democracy has steadily forged forward.

It seems so evident, so manifest upon the face of it that most people are too ignorant to govern themselves and that many are too indifferent to perform their public duties that democracy seems doomed. Yet so dear to the heart of the average man is his liberty and his desire to rule himself and not be ruled by another that democracy is not quenched.

In Italy, and in Spain, at present, democracy is scorned as incompetent and fruitless. In most countries democracies are held responsible for the evils they support.

Yet this country, the wealthiest and most prosperous nation in the world, has demonstrated that with all its faults democracy can be successful.

Still we do not believe wholly in democracy. Or, if we do believe in it it is only as an ideal, something to be sworn by but not to be practiced. Most of us swear by it as an ideal but we swear at it as a working model.

We have an elaborate system of checks to prevent the people from getting what they want or getting it too quickly.

We send our children to schools that are little Prussias, ruled over by little kaisers and kaiserins, alias school teachers.

If we believed thoroughly in democracy we would teach it to our children. We do not want these children to learn how to obey really, although we say we do; what we want is that they shall learn how to govern themselves, and self government is an art. It calls for all the resources of manhood. We must be great in spirit and thoughtful in mind as well as disciplined in habit.

Every schoolroom ought to govern itself, make its own laws and carry out its own purposes.

The business of a teacher is merely to be an adviser and guide. He is not to rule in loco parentis, he is to stand by and direct. He is to be an admonishing friend and not an absolute monarch.

A considerable headway has been made in this business of self governing schools by Wilson R. Gill. A letter lies before me signed by Alexandra L. Galeski of the Wrightman Public School of Washington, D. C., in which she speaks of "the spirit of the old, stupid, shameful monarchical system of school management" and compares it with the new system of children's conduct and she thanks God for the plan.

If we are sincere believers in democracy we ought to train our children in the business.

Aspiration

SOMETIMES, from out of the passing train of days, a perfect day comes by with purple splendors in its distant haze and glory in its sky. Then, ah! that every day could be as fair as that transcendent one with hope and healing in its fragrant air and courage in its sun! Sometimes, in life's long course, a perfect hour dawns on the raptured sense, and then all countless rare enchantments flower of peace and innocence. How blest, how good, if mortals could but clasp that hour and bid it stay, if they could hold within their happy grasp its joy through day on day! But sun and shadow, bloom and blight must be and in man's soul alone can linger still the matchless harmony he knew in hours long flown.

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

THE incandescent electric lamp, so familiar to us all, is believed by many scientists to be Edison's greatest contribution to material progress. The drawing above shows his first practical lamp that was made possible by his ingenious idea of carbonizing spool thread.

WHEN working pressure at the Menlo Park laboratory became too great for even the "wizard" himself, he would hire a sloop and take the boys fishing off Sandy Hook. On one trip Edison fished two days and night without a bite. They had to hoist anchor to make him quit.

WHILE Edison had been perfecting his incandescent electric lighting system, gasoline gas was used for illumination at Menlo Park. Now that the incandescent light was no longer a dream the laboratory and grounds and numbers of houses in the park were lighted by electricity.

ON December 21, 1879, the New York Herald published a full, illustrated account of Edison's triumph. The managing editor had been told that such a light was impossible and he thought his paper had been fooled. He denounced the city editor. (Continued Monday.)
